Town spruces up for face-off

Danville to host VP debate Thursday

By Bruce Schreiner
Associated Press

DANVILLE, Ky. — Politicians aren't the only ones looking for a debate-related boost when Joe Biden and Paul Ryan go toe-to-toe in Kentucky.

In one way or another, the whole town of Danville is hoping to benefit from the vice presidential debate on Thursday.

Streets have been repaved, flowers planted and new signs erected around this picturesque central Kentucky town of about 16,000. One bar is prepping cocktails named for Ryan and Biden while stores have stocked up on politically inspired merchandise, seeking to cash in on throngs of campaign workers, media and political junkies. Small but ambitious Centre College, the site for the upcoming debate, also hopes to raise its name recognition and energize fundraising.

"I think the whole town has that kind of spirit, let's make it as nice as we can,"

said Mary Robin Spoonamore, who owns a bar and liquor store a block off Main Street.

She put in new lighting and a new bar, and has stocked up on high-end bourbons to give visitors a taste of a Kentucky specialty. Her cocktail list this week includes "Biden's Tongue" and "Ryan's Budget."

Only 1 in 4 ready for kindergarten

State panel gets preliminary data

By Janet Cappiello
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE — Just one in four children in the state is prepared for kindergarten, according to preliminary data presented to the Kentucky Board of Education on Tuesday.

"That's big, guys," Education Commissioner Terry Holliday said during a meeting in Frankfort broadcast on the Web. "What we're telling you is that only about a quarter of the students coming to kindergarten are ready for kindergarten."

The preliminary data is showing 24 percent to 28 percent of children are considered prepared for kindergarten, said Karen Dodd, director of strategic planning for the education department.

The data is from preliminary results of kindergarten readiness tests taken by 34,500 children in more than 100 school districts, officials said. Next year, all 174 districts will be required to use the assessments, developed with a company called Brigance.

Holliday told the board he was alarmed by those results when he first saw them, but he is confident there will be swift improvement, partially because he expects the numbers to go up when all school districts use the tests next year.

He said between 50,000 and 55,000 kindergartners enroll in public schools in Kentucky every year.

Responding to a question from the board, Associate Commissioner Felicia Smith said only 30 to 40 districts in Kentucky offer universal preschool.

Board member Brigitte B. Ramsey said the state needs to look at better

Partnership offers free smoke detectors

Gleaner staff

Families who don't have smoke detectors in their homes can get them through the local chapter of the American Red Cross.

The smoke detectors are available, thanks to a grant from Hope Worldwide, a partnership with Lowe's in Henderson and support from the United Way of Henderson County.

All this week, which is National Fire Prevention Week, the American Red Cross wants to remind people to keep their families safe by having a working smoke detector in the home.

"Last year, the Red Cross responded to an emergency nearly every nine minutes — that's tens of thousands of lives instantly changed," according to a news release.

The agency encourages people to go to www.redcross.org for useful tools such as free apps that will put lifesaving skills at people's fingertips, give an emergency plan checklist and make individuals aware of safety training courses in the area.

To contact the Red Cross for a smoke detector or for other preparedness resources, call 826-2775.

Kentucky State Police launching 'Text a Tip'

Gleaner staff

The Kentucky State Police recently kicked off a new crime-fighting program that is literally at the public's fingertips.

The program is called "Text a Tip" and allows people to provide police with confidential information through text messaging.

"Text a Tip is designed to report criminal activity, assist with neighborhood watches and serve as an additional resource for schools and college campuses," officials said.

The state police said anyone with texting capabilities can simply text 67283 in the address field, then type KSPTIP in the message field. People should then leave a space and then enter the information about the crime.

If a tip has been sent successfully, people will receive an instant confirmation text on their phone.

"I think this is a really good way of grabbing those who have information (about crimes) but want to stay out of criminal proceedings," said Trooper Corey King, public information officer with Post 16 in Henderson.

Text a Tip messages are sent to a separate, third-party server which strips identifying information from the message. The texts are then assigned an encrypted alias before being sent to the state police.

The process, King said, "is instantaneous. The company, the third party, does this in seconds."

"People in a large venue ... can text police without others knowing what they're doing," King said.

"This is a way to get good quality information on investigations, maybe even cold cases" from people who otherwise wouldn't get involved, he said.

State park to host 'Finding Audubon'

Gleaner staff

In honor of the opening for the Kentucky National Wildlife Art Exhibit on Saturday, the Ohio Valley Art League will host an event called "Finding Audubon Day" on Saturday at John James Audubon State Park.

The event will run from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the Audubon Museum Garden and will include wildlife artists who will be doing plein-air painting in the garden, a free tour of the museum, a program on "Birds of Prey" and an opportunity to purchase a barbecue lunch from vendors.

At 9 a.m. there also will be a free Bird Walk starting at the steps of the museum.

The opening reception and awards ceremony for the Kentucky National Wildlife Art Exhibit presented by OVAL and the Kentucky Department of Fish & Wildlife Resources will take place at 6 p.m. at Henderson Fine Arts Center.

The art exhibit opening will be followed at 7:30 p.m. by a show of an improvisational comedy titled "Broadway's Next Hit Musical," presented by Henderson Area Arts Alliance as part of its 19th performing arts season.

Skydiver cancels his second attempt at supersonic jump

The Associated Press

ROSWELL, N.M. — Blame it on the wind. Again.

For the second straight day, extreme athlete Felix Baumgartner aborted his planned death-defying 23-mile free fall because of the weather, postponing his quest to become the world’s first supersonic skydiver until at least Thursday.

As he sat Tuesday morning in the pressurized capsule waiting for a 55-story, ultra-thin helium balloon to fill and carry him into the stratosphere, a 25 mph gust rushed across a field near the airport in Roswell, N.M.

The wind rushed so fast that it spun the still-inflating balloon as if it was a giant plastic grocery bag, raising concerns at mission control about whether it was damaged from the jostling.

The balloon is so delicate that it can only take off if winds are 2 mph or below on the ground.

“Not knowing if the winds would continue or not, we made the decision to pull the plug,” mission technical director Art Thompson said. Baumgartner’s team said he has a second balloon and intends to try again.

Thompson said the earliest the team could take another shot would be Thursday because of weather and the need for the crew — which worked

Sandusky sentenced to at least 30 years

By Mark Scolforo
Associated Press

BELLEFONTE, Pa. — Jerry Sandusky, maintaining his innocence, was sentenced Tuesday to at least 30 years in prison — effectively a life sentence — in the child sexual abuse scandal that brought shame to Penn State and led to coach Joe Paterno’s downfall.

A defiant Sandusky gave a rambling statement in which he denied the allegations and talked about his life in prison and the pain of being away from his family.

“I’ve forgiven, I’ve been forgiven. I’ve comforted others, I’ve been comforted. I’ve been kissed by dogs, I’ve been bit by dogs,” he said. “I’ve conformed, I’ve also been different. I’ve been me. I’ve been loved, I’ve been hated.”

Three victims spoke, often fighting back tears. One looked Sandusky in the eyes at times. Two of the men exchanged a long embrace after court was adjourned.

The 68-year-old former Penn State assistant coach was found guilty in June of 45 counts of child sexual abuse, convicted of molesting 10 boys over a 15-year period.

Witnesses said Sandusky used the charitable organization he founded for troubled children as his personal hunting ground to find and groom boys to become his victims.

Judge John Cleland handed down a 30- to 60-year term. He called Sandusky dangerous, saying he betrayed children and abused their trust.

Sandusky’s arrest 11 months ago, and the details that came out during his trial over the summer, transformed Sandusky’s public image from a college coach who had been widely admired for his work with The Second Mile charity into that of a reviled pervert who preyed on the very youngsters who sought his help.

Eight of the boys he was found guilty of molesting testified at his trial, describing a range of abuse that included fondling, oral sex and anal intercourse. One of the prosecution’s star witnesses, former graduate assistant Mike McQueary, testified that he saw Sandusky raping a boy in a locker room shower.

Sandusky has consistently maintained his innocence and plans to appeal. One element of the appeal is expected to be a claim that the defense did not have time to adequately prepare for trial. Sandusky was charged in November, following a lengthy investigation.

Sandusky said he knows in his heart that he did not do what he called “disgusting acts,” repeating a comment he made in a three-minute monologue that aired Monday night by Penn State Com Radio. In the radio recording, Sandusky described himself as the victim of a coordinated conspiracy among Penn State, investigators, attorneys, the media and others.

School restraint changes OK'd

■ Policy limits when student can be held

The Associated Press

FRANKFORT — The state Board of Education has approved some changes to a new statewide policy regarding when and how students may be restrained in public schools.

Board members unanimously backed the amended proposal during a regular meeting Monday in Frankfort.

About 75 people attended a public hearing in September to discuss the proposal, said Kevin Brown, general counsel for the Office of Guiding Support Services.

Department of Education staff used their comments as well as written correspondence to make the changes, or, in many cases, to keep the proposal intact.

“We hope we have reached a good compromise for Kentucky, and hopefully this regulation does that,” Brown told board members.

The proposal prohibits physical restraint of students except when a child’s behavior poses imminent danger of serious physical harm.

It also requires that school staff receive training to help them identify situations considered serious enough for restraint and learn positive reinforcement methods.

In responding to concerns that the regulation would hinder the staff’s ability to break up student fights, Brown emphasized that “most times a student fight is going to have that serious, imminent threat there.”

“This regulation was not designed to have staff necessarily do anything during a student fight,” he said. Rather it is “to make sure kids are not being inappropriately restrained and secluded.”

The amended proposal adds examples of behavior methods used in classrooms that are not considered physical restraint, such as verbal commands and redirecting students to promote safety.

It also adds a restriction on the restraint of students who use their hands to communicate, such as those who use sign language.

The department ignored suggestions to address property damage, saying in written documents explaining the changes that the proposal is focused on student and staff safety.

“The fact that teachers are unsure of what to do in cases where a student is dismantling a classroom and endangering other students and school personnel in the classroom illustrates the extent to which school personnel need quality training in the area of positive behavior supports and interventions,” the department wrote.

Angel Mounds offerings fall ‘Fundays’

Gleaner staff

Angel Mounds Historic Site is offering a new fall activity that focuses on foodways of Native Americans and includes a chance to go through a corn maze.

“We wanted to offer something fun in the spirit of the season but that kept with the tradition of the site,” says Program Developer Haley Tallman. “We thought a corn maze would be the perfect fit.”

Angel Mounds was used as farmland for centuries after its Native American habitants introduced corn to the region.

Family Fundays are taking place each Sunday in October from 1 to 5 p.m. Featuring wild game and gathered edibles, visitors will be encouraged to explore the bounty of their own backyards; learning fresh, healthy and economic benefits of responsible harvesting.

Food samples will include nuts, teas, greens, deer and other game, popcorn from Angel Mounds’ own organic Three Sisters Garden and more. Other Fundays activities related to ancient food ways include archery, atlatl (an ancient spear-throwing device), flint knapping (the art of making knives and arrowheads from stone tools) and children’s games and crafts. Guided hayride tours of the site will also be offered.

Admission is $5 per person and includes access to the museum, corn maze and all activities.

The corn maze is only open through Oct. 28, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 1 to 4 p.m. on Sunday. Admission is $3 per person and does not include Family Fundays or museum admission.

Part of the Indiana State Museum and Historic Sites, Angel Mounds was a thriving ancient metropolis for Mississippian Indians more than 500 years ago.

Today, it is an important site for excavation and research on one of Indiana’s native cultures.

Evansville leaders divided over stadium demolition

The Associated Press

EVANSVILLE — The Evansville City Council isn’t going along yet with the mayor’s plan to tear down the city’s closed Roberts Stadium and convert the site into a park.

Council members voted 6-3 Monday night to block transferring $187,000 raised with an auction of old arena equipment into a demolition account, the Evansville Courier & Press reported.

Mayor Lloyd Winnecke and the city’s parks board have backed a plan to demolish the arena and create a park with skating and dog facilities.

But the low demolition bid of nearly $960,000 far exceeded city’s initial estimate for the work.

Councilman Dan Adams said he thought the city should first try to sell the arena property.

“My motivation is to get money out of it,” Adams said.

“I don’t think there’s been an honest try.”

The 56-year-old Roberts Stadium was shut down with last year’s opening of the city’s new $127 million, 11,000-seat Ford Center arena.

David Rector, the City-County Building Authority’s general manager, said the final demolition cost remains a “moving target” and the $958,000 figure could come down.

Officials have said the initial estimate only covered tearing down the building, not preparing the site for future uses. The mayor has proposed using the auction profits, along with $200,000 set aside for demolition in this year’s budget and $500,000 in next year’s budget to pay for the work.

Parks director Denise Johnson said it costs the city $20,000 to $25,000 a month to pay utility bills and secure the unused building.

Estimates of at least $5 million to build the new park and the cost of maintaining it over the long-term “gives me heartburn,” said Councilman John Friend, who voted against transferring the money to the demolition fund.

A guided hike will be led this Saturday in southern Illinois by the River-to-River Trail Society.

The hike will take place on the Crest Trail at Glen O. Jones Lake in the Saline County State Fish and Wildlife Area south of Illinois 13, roughly midway between Shawneetown and Harrisburg.

The hike, open to the public, is of moderate difficulty and is intended for those who have done some walking. Boots or sturdy shoes are recommended. Participants should bring their own water and a snack. No dogs, please.

Hikers will meet at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Tecumseh Statue and conclude their hike at the Old Stone Face.

Patriot Coal mine retirees write to bankruptcy judge

The Associated Press

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — A federal judge in New York City is hearing from retired coal miners who are fretting about their pensions and health care benefits.

The letters are being sent to a judge overseeing the Patriot Coal bankruptcy case. The Charleston Gazette reports that more than 100 letters have been added to the court record of the case in recent days.

One letter states that Patriot miners gave their best years to coal companies only to see their benefits threatened in retirement.

Patriot is responsible for more than 10,000 retirees and 10,000 dependents, most of them former Peabody Coal employees in West Virginia, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky and Ohio.

A judge has approved an $802 million financing package so the St. Louis company can continue operating while it restructures. Patriot operates the Patriot surface mine in eastern Henderson County and the Highland and Dodge Hill underground mines in Union County as well as mines in West Virginia. It closed the Freedom underground mine in eastern Henderson County this summer because of falling demand.

Romney reference brings Big Bird to political arena

Once Mitt Romney brushes the yellow feathers off his sharply tailored suit, the GOP presidential candidate may regret ever having tangled with Big Bird, increasingly looking like the signature moment of last week’s presidential debate.

Apologizing in advance to moderator Jim Lehrer, he said, “I’m going to stop the subsidy to PBS. ... I like PBS. I love Big Bird,” adding that he wouldn’t continue borrowing money from China to pay for him.

Perhaps Romney hoped to show he would be bold and fearless in cutting the federal budget. Polls show a large majority of Americans like PBS, strongly favor the children’s educational show “Sesame Street,” and love the show’s Big Bird character, a genial 8’ 2” mound of feathers and foam rubber that sometimes thinks it’s a lark, sometimes a canary. But mess with Big Bird at your peril.

To get the dull stuff out of the way first: The Corporation for Public Broadcasting receives $445 million, about 1/100th of 1 percent of the federal budget.

Very little of that finds its way down to “Sesame Street,” which is largely self-supporting.

And in the massive spectrum of American borrowing, we don’t actually borrow all that much from China. We borrow most of it from ourselves.

If Romney really wanted to cut the deficit, he could propose ending the favored tax treatment of carried interest on Wall Street.

But, as President Barack Obama was quick to observe, it’s easier to take on Sesame Street than Wall Street. Well, maybe not quite so easy.

You would think the threat to Big Bird — no one seemed to care about poor Lehrer — seemed like one of those throwaway lines that would quickly blow over. No such luck for the Romney camp.

Big Bird quickly became a staple topic of late-night comedians; he — and we’re only assuming it’s a he — was all over the Internet, made a guest appearance on “Saturday Night Live,” and come Monday morning he was on the front page of The New York Times.

The political analysts speculated that Big Bird might become as ubiquitous to this campaign as Joe the Plumber did in 2008.

Romney would like the voters to remember one thing from this debate: He won. That may not be the voters’ takeaway. Jennifer Mercieca, an expert in political discourse at Texas A&M, told The Associated Press: “We learned that he wasn’t concerned about Big Bird. That might be the one thing we remember about this debate.”

your tonier bistros).

In recent years, I’ve tried to up my culinary game further. We’ve been enjoying Thai food and we’re learning more about sushi (make mine a spicy tuna roll with some ginger and wasabi, please).

On a cold and rainy night in downtown Lexington several Januarys ago, we ducked into a warm and cozy Indian restaurant. Some well-traveled friends helped us navigate through the unfamiliar menu. For an appetizer, we ordered vegetable samosas (a potato and pea mash in a shell, seasoned with chutney). For an entree, chicken tandoori (marinated for hours in a variety of spices). For sides, aloo gobi (a potato and cauliflower mixture) and palak paneer (spinach and fresh cheese). Plus naan bread (similar to pita). Finally, for dessert, rice pudding.

Several such meals later — and now armed with spices and industrial strength peppers mail-ordered from the Penzeys catalog — Donna has been preparing progressively hotter Indian food at home.

More recently, we found ourselves at a tiny 20-seat establishment called Cafe Mediterranean. It was there, without exactly knowing what it was, that I ordered a falafel on pita with garlicky hummus on the side, and enjoyed myself very much.

We recently vacationed with friends in a northern coastal state famed for a particular large crustacean. During the week, I ate a couple of boiled large crustaceans, lunched on a large-crustacean loaf and sipped large-crustacean bisque. There were also several slices of wild-blueberry pie (eaten, variously, at breakfast, lunch and dinner) and a variety of celebratory beverages.

Even with hours of hiking on trails that the National Park Service curiously labeled as merely “moderate” — despite lengthy stretches that required clambering across granite rubble fields, up nearly vertical hillsides and along damp split-log catwalks — I grew concerned about the growing state of my figure.

One night, we popped into a little pub, located on the grounds of a local brewery, that advertised barbecue. Readers of this space will be familiar with my abiding skepticism of restaurant barbecue, especially in states better known for moose than mutton.

Further, just days earlier I had been reading about the emergence of outstanding veggie burgers in Chicago, once famed as The Nation’s Slaughterhouse.

The Terzo Piano cafe in the Art Institute of Chicago, I read, serves what was described as a “loosely formed mix of chickpeas, shredded zucchini and Calabrian chiles” served open-faced on olive-oiled multiseed toast “with a puddle of spicy romesco sauce alongside.”

The Haymarket Pub & Brewery’s vegan burger consists of black beans and beets mixed with Scottish unrolled oats.

And the Mity Nice Bar & Grill makes a patty from mushrooms, spinach and pumpkin seeds, to which Parmesan cheese and panko breadcrumbs provide “a satisfyingly savory crunch.”

It sounded like new ground that was worth plowing.

At the New England barbecue joint, we were shown our seats at a picnic table inside a tent. Nearby, some locals congregated around a bar to watch Sunday Night Football. The atmosphere was imbued with wood smoke; the menu advertised “All-You-Can-Eat-BBQ Saturdays.”

The waiter, Paul, came by for our orders.

Our friend Dick ordered a half-slab of ribs. His wife, Mary, got Buffalo wings. Donna asked for a barbecue pork sandwich. But I was intrigued by an entry at the bottom of the menu.

“I see you have a veggie burger,” I said earnestly. “Is it any good?”

Paul looked at me silently.

“I was reading an article about them,” I added, a little less certainly.

“You read an awticul?” Paul repeated in his nor’easter accent.

I nodded. He sighed. “You’re in a place called ‘Mainely Meat,’” he pointed out.

I took his point immediately. “I’ll have the cheeseburger, medium.”

“Good choice,” Paul said approvingly.

And it was a good choice — a half-pound of juicy deliciousness topped with melted American cheese, iceberg lettuce, a couple of slices of late-season tomato and tangy onion. I sprinkled some salt on the patty to bring out its beefy wonderfulness.

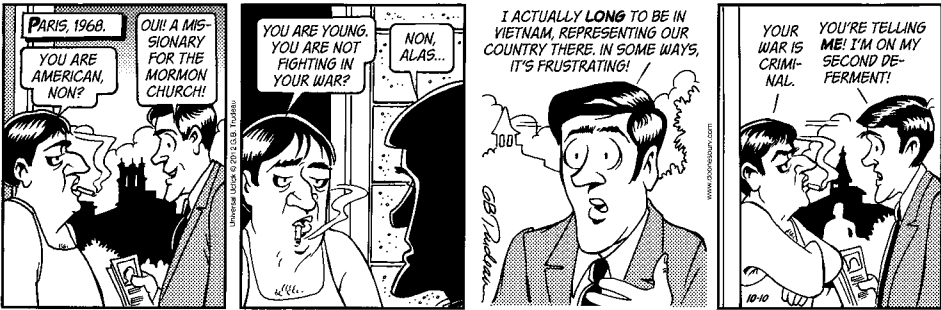

There’s a place in the world for falafel and hummus, for chickpeas and romesco sauce. There’s a place in the world to be picky about your lettuce and discerning about your bread.

But on an autumn weekend night on the coast, with barbecue smoke in the air and football on the TV — and with Paul waiting for your order — well, that’s not the time.

At a time like that, order your ribs or your burger ... and hope there’s blueberry pie for dessert. You can always hike tomorrow.

Terror suspect pleads not guilty

By Tom Hays and Larry Neumeister
Associated Press

NEW YORK — An Egyptian-born preacher pleaded not guilty Tuesday to conspiring with Seattle men to set up a terrorist training camp in Oregon, three days after he and four others were brought to the United States from England to face terrorism charges.

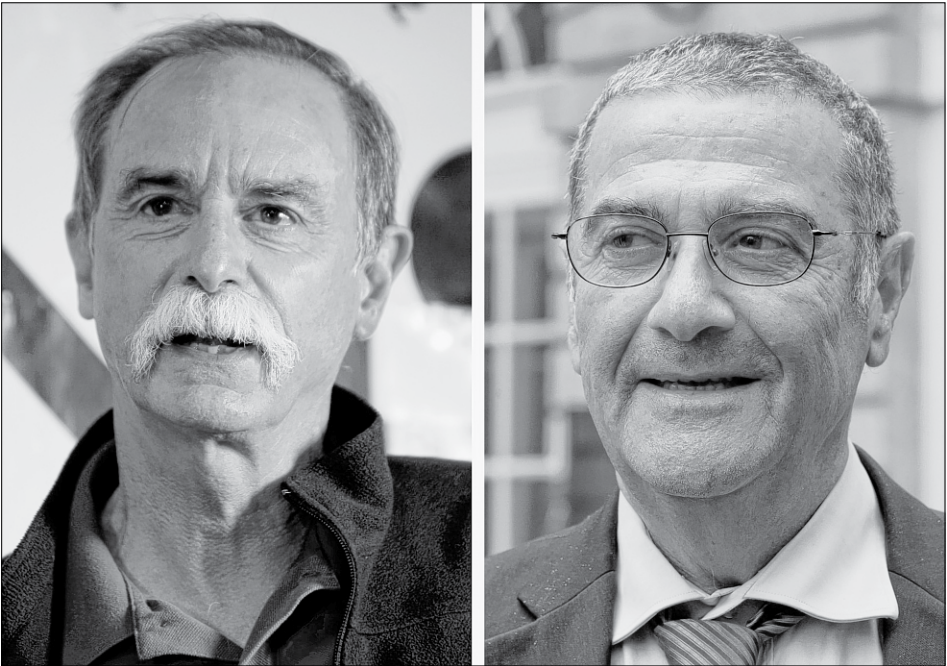

Mustafa Kamel Mustafa, 54, entered the plea shortly before U.S. District Judge Katherine B. Forrest set an Aug. 26 trial date. Mustafa, widely known by the name Abu Hamza al-Masri, is also accused of helping abduct 16 hostages, two of them American tourists, in Yemen in 1998.

“He’s presumed innocent,” his court-appointed lawyer, Jeremy Schneider, said outside court afterward. When someone asked Schneider whether he thought his client was a terrorist, he snapped: “That’s a silly question.”

Schneider said his client prefers to be known as Mustafa Kamel Mustafa, the name listed first on his indictment. Abu Hamza and Abu Hamza al-Masri are listed as aliases.

There was no mention in court Tuesday about access to the prosthetics — including a hook — that Mustafa uses in place of the hands he says he lost fighting the Soviets in Afghanistan, but Schneider said outside court that it was a problem for him.

“I believe he has use of them for a certain part of the day but not long enough to allow him to function the way he should function,” he said.

U.S., French physicists win Nobel for quantum work

By Malcolm Ritter and Karl Ritter
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A Frenchman and an American shared the Nobel Prize in physics Tuesday for inventing methods to peer into the bizarre quantum world of ultra-tiny particles, work that could help in creating a new generation of super-fast computers.

Serge Haroche, of France, and American David Wineland opened the door to new experiments in quantum physics in the 1990s by showing how to observe individual atoms and particles of light called photons while preserving their quantum properties.

Quantum physics, a field about a century old, explains a lot about nature but includes some weird-sounding behavior by individual, isolated particles.

A particle resists our idea of either-or: it’s not here or there, it’s sort of both. It’s not spinning clockwise or counter-clockwise, but a bit of both. It gets a definite location or spin only when it’s measured.

Working separately, the two scientists, both 68, developed “ingenious laboratory methods” that allowed them to manage and measure and control fragile quantum states, the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences said.

Wineland traps ions — electrically charged atoms — and measures them with light, while Haroche controls and measures photons.

“Their ground-breaking methods have enabled this field of research to take the very first steps towards building a new type of superfast computer based on quantum physics,” the academy said. “The research has also led to the construction of extremely precise clocks that could become the future basis for a new standard of time.”

Haroche is a professor at the College de France and Ecole Normale Supérieure in Paris. Wineland is a physicist at the National Institute of Standards and Technology, or NIST, and the University of Colorado in Boulder.

Asked how he will celebrate, Wineland said: “I’ll probably be pretty worn out by this evening. I’ll probably have a glass of wine and fall asleep.”

Motel workers help unravel bomb plot

MIAMI — A bright green duffel bag caught maintenance worker Ralph Smith’s eye as he emptied trash in a bin at a motel just off a major interstate in northeast Oklahoma.

Curious, he unzipped it. Inside were a pile of brown bottles with cloth wicks attached by duct tape. Then he noticed an empty gas can in the bin, and a co-worker remembered seeing a motel guest with it two days earlier.

They quickly reported their observations to police, leading to the arrest of a 23-year-old Illinois man who authorities say planned to attack dozens of churches with Molotov cocktails. Gregory Arthur Weiler II, 23, of Elk Grove Village, Ill., has been charged with threatening to use an explosive or incendiary device and violating the Oklahoma Antiterrorism Act.

“I don’t feel like I’m a hero or anything like that,” Smith said Tuesday. “We were doing it because we want the public to know people can stay here and this is not a bad place.”

Maintenance worker Steve Ballenger said he saw Weiler with the gas can two days earlier and Weiler explained that he had run out of gas in his car.

NATO backs Turkey in growing standoff

NATO is ready to defend Turkey, the alliance’s top official said Tuesday, in a warning to Syria after a week of cross-border artillery and mortar exchanges escalated tensions between the two countries.

Ankara has sent more fighter jets to reinforce an air base close to the frontier with Syria where shells killed five Turkish civilians last week. Syria has defended its shelling of neighboring Turkey as an accidental outcome of its 18-month-old civil war.

The comments by NATO Secretary-General Anders Fogh Rasmussen were the strongest show of support to Turkey since the firing began Wednesday — though the solidarity is largely symbolic..

U.S. leaders unfazed by insider attacks

The killings of more than 130 U.S. and allied forces by Afghan troops or those dressed like them is not deterring NATO countries from the war in Afghanistan, two senior U.S. defense officials said Tuesday.

As NATO defense ministers gather this week, the top U.S. commander in Afghanistan will tell worried allies today what the U.S. is doing to stop the attacks.

The officials said that so far NATO ministers attending the conference here have not used the meeting to threaten any additional withdrawals of troops.

U.S. officials, including Defense Secretary Leon Panetta, are expected to assure the ministers that commanders have come up with a range of ways to reduce the attacks. And they will insist that while the Taliban has seized on the attacks as a way to derail the fight and the trust between allied and Afghan forces, it is not yet a threat to the war strategy.

ISRAEL

Prime minister calls for early elections

JERUSALEM — Israel’s prime minister Tuesday ordered new parliamentary elections in early 2013, eight months ahead of schedule, setting the stage for a lightning quick campaign that likely will win him re-election.

For nearly four years, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has presided over a conservative coalition that has proved stable in a country where governments rarely serve out a full term. Re-election could grant him a fresh mandate to continue his tough stance toward Iran’s suspect nuclear program and further stall the peace process with the Palestinians.

Netanyahu said he was forced to call the snap polls after his coalition could not agree on a budget. He is riding a wave of popularity and his opposition is fragmented.

Exploding shells rock military test site

MOSCOW — A series of blasts from exploding shells rocked a Russian military test site Tuesday, breaking windows and releasing giant clouds of smoke over Orenburg near the Kazakhstan border.

The emergency services said one military officer was hospitalized, but no other injuries were reported.

Military prosecutor Yevgeny Ivanov said the explosions were set off by a fire that may have been caused by someone smoking.

Blindfolded and handcuffed suspected al-Qaida members are guarded by Iraqi army soldiers in July in an Iraqi army base in Hillah, about 60 miles south of Baghdad. Iraq has seen a jump in al-Qaida attacks over the past 10 weeks as the group regains strength in the country.

Al-Qaida growing in Iraq amid instability, officials say

By Qassim Abdul-Zahra and Lara Jakes
Associated Press

BAGHDAD — Al-Qaida is rebuilding in Iraq and has set up training camps for insurgents in the nation’s western deserts as the extremist group seizes on regional instability and government security failures to regain strength, officials say.

Iraq has seen a jump in al-Qaida attacks over the past 10 weeks, and officials believe most of the fighters are former prisoners who either have escaped from jail or were released by Iraqi authorities for lack of evidence after the U.S. military withdrawal in December. Many are said to be Saudi or from Sunni-dominated Gulf states.

During the war and its aftermath, U.S. forces, joined by allied Sunni groups and later by Iraqi counterterror forces, beat back al-Qaida’s Iraqi branch.

But now, Iraqi and U.S. officials say, the insurgent group has more than doubled in numbers from a year ago — from about 1,000 to 2,500 fighters. It is carrying out an average of 140 attacks each week across Iraq, up from 75 attacks each week earlier this year, according to Pentagon data.

The new growth of al-Qaida in Iraq, also known as the Islamic State of Iraq, is not entirely unexpected. Last November, the top U.S. military official in Iraq, Army Gen. Lloyd Austin, predicted turbulence ahead for Iraq’s security forces. But he doubted Iraq would return to the days of widespread fighting between Shiite militias and Sunni insurgents, including al-Qaida, that brought the Islamic country to the brink of civil war.

While there’s no sign of Iraq headed back toward sectarian warfare — mostly because Shiite militias are not retaliating to their deadly attacks — al-Qaida’s revival is terrifying to ordinary Iraqis.

Generally, the militant group does not does not launch attacks or otherwise operate beyond Iraq’s borders. For years, it has targeted Shiite pilgrims, security forces, officials in the Shiite-led government and — until it left — the U.S. military. On Tuesday, a series of bombings and drive-by shootings killed six people, including three soldiers and a judge, in Baghdad and the former al-Qaida strongholds of Mosul and Tal Afar in northern Iraq.

Mobile County Sheriff Sam Cochran said Gil Collar, 18, took the hallucinogenic during a music festival Saturday before assaulting two people in vehicles and attempting to bite a woman’s arm.

Authorities said Collar then went to the campus police headquarters, where he was shot by university Police Officer Trevis Austin. Austin is on leave while investigators review the shooting.

Video taken by a surveillance camera showed Collar as he pursued the retreating officer more than 50 feet outside the building, Cochran said.

Collar got within five feet of Austin, and the officer fired once, striking the student in the chest, Cochran said.

Cochran said Austin was armed only with a gun during the confrontation.

The sheriff said it was unclear whether the officer could have avoided the shooting even if he had a nonlethal weapon to subdue the student.

Taliban shoots girl activist in Pakistan

By Sherin Zada and Rebecca Santana
Associated Press

MINGORA, Pakistan — Malala Yousufzai, 14, was admired across a battle-scarred region of Pakistan for exposing the Taliban’s atrocities and advocating for girls education in the face of religious extremists.

On Tuesday, the Taliban nearly killed her to quiet her message.

A gunman approached a bus taking children home from school in the volatile northern Swat Valley and shot Malala in the head and neck. Another girl on the bus also was wounded.

The young activist was flown to a military hospital in the frontier city of Peshawar.

A doctor in Mingora, Tariq Mohammad, said her wounds weren’t life-threatening, but a provincial information minister said after a medical board examined the girl that the next few days would be crucial.

When she was 11, Malala began writing a blog for the BBC about life under the Taliban, under the pseudonym Gul Makai.

She began speaking publicly in 2009 about the need for girls education — which the Taliban strongly opposes. The extremist movement was quick to claim responsibility for shooting her.

“This was a new chapter of obscenity, and we have to finish this chapter,” Taliban spokesman Ahsanullah Ahsan by telephone.

The shooting provoked outrage across the country, angering Pakistanis who have seen a succession of stories about violence against women by the Taliban.

Woman donates kidney to stranger

■ Hoosier gives gifts to others as part of her own birthday

By Jaclyn Youhana
The Journal Gazette

FORT WAYNE, Ind. — Every year in November, Rachel Bennett Steury gives a gift to someone else for her birthday.

Sometimes she donates blood or attends a charity auction — anything, she says, to give back.

In July, Bennett Steury, a healthy 30-something from Auburn, celebrated an earlier birthday by giving a kidney to a stranger in Pennsylvania.

After watching a CBS “Evening News” report about the National Kidney Registry, the largest online database of living organ donors in the country, Bennett Steury decided to become what the registry calls a good Samaritan donor — a person who donates a kidney to someone he doesn’t know.

The news report featured a donation chain in which a good Samaritan donor donated a kidney to a 25-year-old woman, whose brother donated his kidney to a 45-year-old man, whose wife donated her kidney to an 83-year-old man, and so forth, for a total of 20 people.

As of midweek, the registry’s website reported it was responsible for 536 transplants.

“I was the 501st transplant facilitated,” Bennett Steury told The Journal Gazette.

After watching the TV news segment around her birthday in 2008, Bennett Steury started to do some research, and she learned how hard it is to be on a waiting list for a kidney.

The Living Kidney Donors Network, a program similar to the National Kidney Registry, estimates there are more than 80,000 people waiting for kidney transplants. Many of those people wait more than five years to receive a kidney, often from someone who has died.

“If someone needs a kidney, the family and community will try to find one,” says Bennett Steury, 35. “Then (the patient will go on a) waiting list. That’s where they sit, and sometimes, that’s where they die.”

When Bennett Steury first shared her idea with her husband, Mathew Steury, he was nervous, he says. He worried about the procedure, but his wife explained the process enough that, going into the surgery, he was comfortable and supportive of her decision.

“I think she’s an amazing woman, but I thought that before the operation,” Steury says. “This just amplifies the feelings I have for my wife.”

Most family members mirrored Steury’s support, while others were more hesitant. “What if you need that kidney later in life?” is a question often asked of living donors.

When kidneys fail, Bennett Steury says, they tend to fail together. It’s uncommon for one to fail and one to remain viable, so if a donor has kidney failure later in life, that kidney donated years before wouldn’t have helped — it likely would have failed, too. In addition, those who donate kidneys and need one later in life are moved to the top of waiting lists, right below children, she says.

“All the research tells me it’s pretty safe,” she says. “And I’m healthy already.”

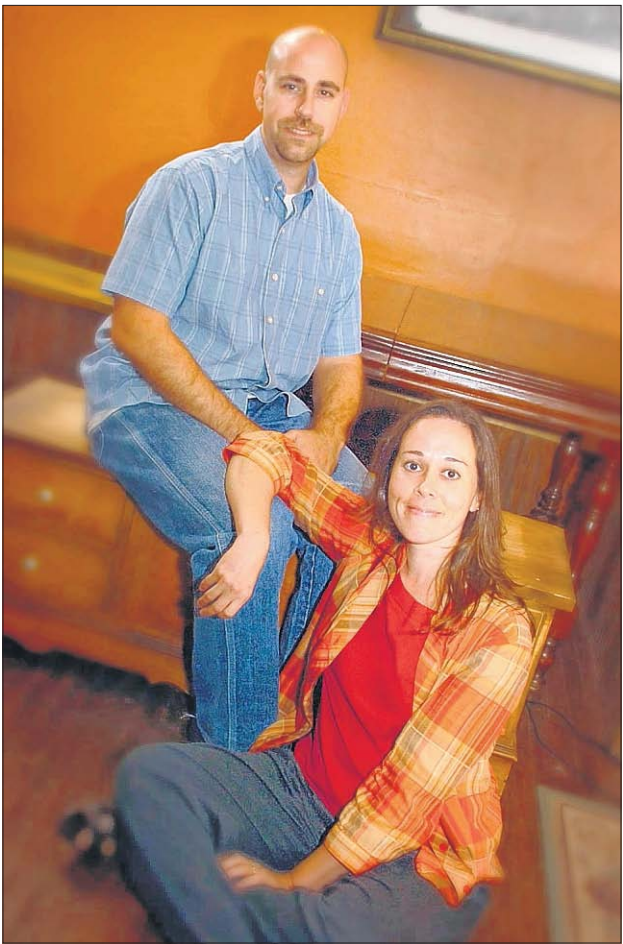

Before a donor is permitted to donate, the National Kidney Registry has a series of steps to follow, including undergoing a series of tests and finding a match, which is the hard part.

Ideally, doctors want a donor and recipient to match on six antigens, which is considered a perfect match. An antigen is a substance in the body that causes the immune system to produce antibodies to fight.

When four or five antigens match, it is considered a good match, Bennett Steury says. The fewer the matched antigens, the greater the likelihood a body will reject its new organ.

Bennett Steury did not pay for any part of her surgery. In the case of such donations, the recipient’s insurance or Medicare covers the cost. A lifetime on dialysis, Bennett Steury says, costs about $1 million, but a transplant is about $200,000.

She also didn’t have to

pay for the stay in Chicago, where her surgery took place. Though she was released from the hospital on a Saturday, doctors wanted her to stick around until Wednesday so they could monitor her progress. The National Kidney Registry covered Bennett Steury and her husband’s hotel stay, food and pain medications.

GOOD SAMARITAN DONORS

Sometimes, however, the good Samaritan donor will turn down the registry’s aid, says Gareth Hil, CEO of the National Kidney Registry. He’d like to see the recipient’s insurance cover all costs, including travel and hotel stays.

“We just think these are wonderful people,” he says. “If anybody’s ever questioning the world today and the goodness in the world, all they need to do is look to these good Samaritan donors. That’s evidence that there are amazing people in the world who are willing to do amazing things.”

More than three years have passed since Bennett Steury learned about the National Kidney Registry, and she had her surgery two months ago. Her experience with the donation process went well: Her kidney went to a patient in Pennsylvania, and the patient had a loved one who then donated to a man who had stayed down the hall from Bennett Steury.

The petite woman checked into her hospital suite at Loyola University Medical Center near Chicago — which has done surgeries on close to 20 good Samaritan donors, Hil says — on July 25.

When she signed up for the registry, no Indiana hospitals were listed as participating medical centers; today, the Indiana University Health Transplant in Indianapolis is included on the list.

Thirty million Americans suffer from rare diseases

By Erin Allday
San Francisco Chronicle

There may be only a few thousand people in the United States who suffer from Hermansky-Pudlak syndrome, a disease so rare that most doctors have never even heard of it, much less know how to treat it.

But this very unusual condition is the focus of a documentary currently airing on public television, made by two Stanford University filmmakers who are trying to draw attention to the plight of patients who suffer from rare diseases.

There are a lot of those patients. While the number of people who suffer any specific disease is small, more than 30 million Americans are thought to have a rare disease. And though their symptoms and prognoses may be vastly different, they all share the isolation and lack of medical support endemic to suffering a disease few people have and no one knows anything about.

“Rare diseases, when you take them all together, are really common,” said Dr. Maren Grainger-Monsen, a Stanford bioethicist who produced the documentary, called “Rare,” with Nicole Newnham. The movie was released earlier this year.

“When we’ve shown this movie, we’ve heard from a lot of people who said they had a rare disease, or someone in their family does or they know someone with a rare disease,” Grainger-Monsen said. “I think people have taken a lot of hope from that, from knowing there are others like them.”

Many patients with rare conditions lack adequate, disease-specific treatments — assuming they’ve even been diagnosed at all. They will often go through years of uncertainty and multiple misdiagnoses before finally learning the name for their disease.

Once diagnosed, patients will sometimes seek out others like them, but finding anyone can be next to impossible when there may be no one in the same county or even state who shares the condition. The Internet has helped patients form communities.

A major goal of those patient communities, aside from simply providing support to their members, is to draw attention to their disease. That can be a tough task for patients with any medical condition, but it’s far more difficult for those with rare diseases, who have to compete against the advocacy machines for conditions like heart disease and breast cancer.

As a result, many sufferers of rare diseases, along with their friends and family, have united to form groups that lobby on behalf of all patients with unusual diagnoses. At the same time, disease-specific advocacy groups also have sprung up.

The Hermansky-Pudlak Syndrome Network was created by the parent of a patient in 1992, to find other people with the condition and to work with doctors and scientists to seek treatments. Hermansky-Pudlak is a genetic condition that is marked by albinism, bleeding disorders and, in some cases, lung and bowel diseases.

The Stanford film follows parent Donna Appell as she tries to find HPS patients to participate in a clinical trial to test a new drug for the disease. Over the course of the 50-minute film, Appell and a scientist at the National Institutes of Health form a team of sorts — Appell trying to supply the patients so the scientist can conduct his research.

It is estimated that approximately 1 in 88 children in the United States suffer from an Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD). Autism, Asperger's Disorder and Pervasive Developmental Disorder Not Otherwise Specified (PDD-NOS) are three common ASDs. Some symptoms of these conditions may include impaired social interactions, dysfunction in verbal and nonverbal communication, or limited interest in activities or play.

Deaconess Clinic physicians are participating in a global clinical research study evaluating the safety, tolerability, and effectiveness of an investigational drug on social interaction and communication skills in children age 6 to 12 with Autism, Asperger's Disorder, or PDD-NOS. Qualified participants will receive study-related office visits and study drug at no cost.

Dancing around global warming

■ Environmental issue touchy subject for both candidates

By David R. Baker
San Francisco Chronicle

Global warming may be the biggest topic that neither President Barack Obama nor GOP presidential candidate Mitt Romney wants to touch.

Obama devoted all of four sentences to climate change in his speech at the Democratic National Convention last month. Romney rarely mentions it at all.

It's a stark change from the 2008 presidential race, when both Obama and his Republican opponent, John McCain, preached the need to reduce greenhouse gases. And environmentalists are furious the issue is largely ignored.

"The silence of Governor Romney and President Obama on climate change is deafening," said Erich Pica, president of the environmental group Friends of the Earth Action.

His organization has launched a campaign called Climate Silence to inject global warming into the presidential race, working with another group called Forecast the Facts. The campaign's website features photos of Obama and Romney with duct tape over their mouths.

"Voters deserve to know where they stand on the most serious threat to our nation," Pica said in a news release. "Anyone who is elected to lead the country — or aspires to do so — should realize that true leadership means a willingness to engage difficult issues, not sweep them under the rug."

Nine environmental groups circulated petitions asking journalist Jim Lehrer, the moderator of last week's debate, to press the candidates on global warming. About 160,000 people signed, but Lehrer didn't mention climate change, or energy.

"It's often true that political speech lags behind public understanding," said Steve Cochran, vice president of climate policy at the Environmental Defense Fund, which participated in the letter-writing campaign. "The population is ahead of the politicians on this."

Each candidate, analysts say, has reasons to avoid discussion of the issue.

Among Republicans, skepticism about climate change has hardened into outright rejection. They tend to view efforts to cap the greenhouse gas emissions that come from burning fossil fuels as heavy-handed government interference in the free market, if not a threat to personal liberty. After the solar firm Solyndra's bankruptcy, they deride government support for clean-energy companies.

A poll conducted last month by Bloomberg found only 26 percent of Republicans believe human activity is warming the planet. Contrast that with 78 percent of Democrats and 56 percent of independents.

"The GOP is as stony a ground for that issue as you can find today," said Jerry Taylor, a senior fellow at the Cato Institute libertarian think tank and a frequent critic of federal environmental policy.

As governor of Massachusetts, Romney explored ways to fight global warming. But he eventually backed out of a multistate plan to limit greenhouse gas levels through the use of a cap-and-trade system, in which power plants buy and sell permits to emit those gases.

Now Romney says he is uncertain about the extent of warming and people's role in it, and he supports more research into the issue.

Obama camp deploys Big Bird in new TV ad

By Beth Fouhy
Associated Press

NEW YORK — President Barack Obama deployed Big Bird in a new campaign ad Tuesday mocking Mitt Romney's vow to end federal funding for public broadcasting.

Romney's campaign dismissed it as an example of Obama being small-minded while the foundation behind Big Bird's program, "Sesame Street," asked that the ad be taken down.

The satirical spot, set to air on national broadcast and cable TV stations, shows images of convicted financiers, including Bernie Madoff and Enron's Ken Lay, and suggests Romney thinks Big Bird is behind their crimes.

"Only one man has the guts to speak his name," the ad says.

Romney said in last week's nationally televised debate with Obama that he liked Big Bird but would, if elected, end federal subsidies for the Public Broadcasting Service to help balance the budget. PBS airs "Sesame Street."

Obama seized on that comment after the debate and has used it every day since to poke at Romney.

"He'll get rid of regulations on Wall Street, but he's going to crack down on Sesame Street. Thank goodness somebody is finally cracking down on Big Bird," Obama joked at a campaign rally in Madison, Wis., the day after the debate, as his audience roared with laughter. "Who knew that he was responsible for all these deficits? Elmo has got to watch out."

But Sesame Workshop, which supports "Sesame Street," didn't see it as a laughing matter.

"Sesame Workshop is a nonpartisan, nonprofit organization and we do not endorse candidates or participate in political campaigns," the organization said in a terse, two-sentence statement. "We have approved no campaign ads and, as is our general practice, have requested that the ad be taken down."

Infrastructure among issues at stake in election

By Jason Keyser
Associated Press

THE ISSUE:

From bridges to broadband, America's infrastructure is supposed to be speeding along commerce, delivering us to work and piping energy and water into our homes and businesses.

But just repairing all the breakdowns and potholes would cost tens of billions more than we're currently spending each year. Experts warn the resulting infrastructure and innovation deficit is jeopardizing our global economic competitiveness.

Traditionally nonpartisan territory, spending for transportation and other megaprojects is now routinely caught up in politics, with Democrats and Republicans divided over how to pay for public works and which ones.

WHERE THEY STAND:

President Barack Obama has favored stimulus-style infrastructure spending plans, talking up highway, bridge and rail repairs as job creators, and pushed for innovations like high-speed rail and a national infrastructure bank to finance projects with the help of private capital. But Republican opposition to increased spending and taxes has blunted many such plans.

Mitt Romney favors less involvement by the federal government in infrastructure, preferring to let states lead the way. Romney shuns the idea that public-works spending is a good way to jumpstart the economy, saying decisions on worthy projects should be based on need and potential returns.

Romney also wants to privatize Amtrak by ending federal subsidies for the money-losing passenger rail system. He's OK with borrowing to pay for megaprojects if there's a revenue stream to pay the money back, like tolls or port fees.

WHY IT MATTERS:

Much of America's infrastructure, including its interstate highway system, is more than half a century old and in need of serious work to keep pace with a rising population. Highway, rail and airport bottlenecks slow the movement of goods and commuters, costing billions in wasted time and fuel and even measurably slowing the economy.

The World Economic Forum put the U.S. 24th last year in the quality of its infrastructure, down from fifth in 2002. The rest of the developed world sets aside on average about 53 percent more of its gross domestic product on transportation infrastructure than the U.S. does.

What to expect when Biden, Ryan face off

By Michael Collins
Scripps Howard News Service

DANVILLE, Ky. – Vice President Joe Biden and GOP vice presidential nominee Paul Ryan will face off Thursday night during a nationally televised debate from Danville. Here’s what you can expect.

Q: What is at stake?

A: For Biden, the challenge will be to get the Democratic ticket back on solid footing after President Barack Obama’s less-than-stellar performance at the presidential debate last week in Denver.

For Ryan, the objective will be to keep up the enthusiasm and energy that seems to be following Mitt Romney after he performed much better than expected in Denver.

“Will Biden be able to arrest some of the momentum that Romney picked up (in Denver) or will the Romney campaign redouble that and send the Obama campaign kind of limping into the second presidential debate?” asked Russell Muirhead, associate professor of democracy and

Q: What must Biden accomplish?

A: Biden’s mission will be to get the Democrats back on message, so look for him to go on the attack. He likely will make the case that Romney’s tax plan benefits the wealthy and hurts the middle class.

He probably will defend the administration’s health-care reforms. And he likely will go where Obama did not go in Denver and attack Romney over his claims that 47 percent of Americans don’t pay taxes.

“I think you’ll see the vice president take the gloves off, and I think it’s going to be pretty hard-hitting,” said Sean Sutton, an expert on presidential races and chairman of the political science department at the Rochester Institute of Technology in New York.

Q: What must Ryan accomplish?

A: Though Ryan has served in Congress for 14 years, he still is largely unknown to most voters outside his home state of Wisconsin. Ryan must introduce himself to a national audience and show he is ready to step into the presidency in the event something should happen to Romney.

“The most important job for him is to make an emotional connection to voters — and by emotional connection, I mean present himself as a likeable and trustworthy person,” Muirhead said.

Q: What must Biden avoid?

A: Biden can be long-winded and speak off the cuff, often trampling Obama’s message in the process. “Biden is at his best when he’s crisp and disciplined,” Muirhead said. “He’s such a generous speaker that he sometimes relaxes that discipline and tries people’s patience. He needs to avoid speaking in an undisciplined way.”

Q: What must Ryan avoid?

A: Ryan often has been at the center of some of the most bitter partisan debates over fiscal policy. In debating Biden, Ryan must moderate those positions for a national audience without losing the conservative backing.

CANOE

was to paddle to the Gulf of Mexico and then head to the Southwest on foot.

But a stopover in Henderson may have nixed the canoeing part of the plan.

Conlon said he reached this area on Thursday and paddled to Hays boat ramp.

He told The Gleaner that he left the canoe, constructed by a friend, hidden in some bushes “well off the bank.”

“I left it there Thursday night and went back on Sunday night, and it was gone,” said Conlon, who is staying with a Henderson resident who is an acquaintance.

Conlon said he has spoken with someone who saw the canoe at Hays boat ramp about 7 p.m. Sunday.

He said he went to get the canoe at 8 p.m.

“It was taken sometime between 7 and 8 p.m.,” Conlon said.

“The person who saw it told me it was halfway in the water. That means someone moved it. I’ve been paddling from Cincinnati, so I know where the canoe should be placed,” he said.

Since setting out roughly six weeks ago, Conlon said he’s ventured inland two times.

“Each time to spend a week in a monastery,” he said. “The Evansville area was going to be my last major respite ...” before heading toward the Gulf.

Conlon said the canoe is presumed stolen.

Henderson police said they are investigating the theft, but at this time there aren’t any leads.

Conlon said the loss of the canoe won’t suspend his journey.

“I’ll stay a few days (in Henderson) and then go on foot,” he said. “I’ve been planning this trip for two years.”

Conlon, who is considering entering the priesthood, said he’s been given a one-year sabbatical from seminary. The sabbatical “is to be given to spiritual matters.”

“This pilgrimage is kind of a year of reflection,” he said.

The missing canoe, “is part of the pilgrimage,” he said.

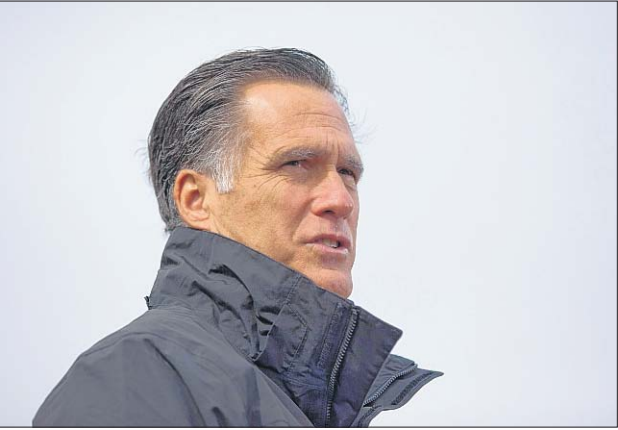

“The mundane and the profane are part of it ... something to be anticipated,” but not expected, Conlon said.

“Any frustration that occurs now is part of the prayer,” he said. “This whole pilgrimage is an exercise in trust ... trusting Providence.”

The canoe is described as 17.5 feet in length and handcrafted.

It’s a single-person canoe, red in color with “Protect Our River” written in white on the left side.

Anyone with information about the canoe is asked to call the Henderson Police Department at 831-1295 or Cathy Gish at 826-8777 or 860-8787.

Race between GOP’s Romney, president still all about Ohio

By Kasie Hunt and Ben Feller
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio – It’s still all about Ohio.

After a strong debate performance, Republican challenger Mitt Romney is intensifying his efforts in the state that’s critical to his White House hopes, while President Barack Obama works to hang on to the polling edge he’s had here for weeks.

Both candidates campaigned hard in the state Tuesday, the last day of voter registration ahead of Election Day, now just four weeks away.

“Find at least one person who voted for Barack Obama last time and convince them to come join our team,” Romney told voters in Van Meter, Iowa, before hurrying eastward to make a similar pitch in Ohio, where he was campaigning with New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie.

Obama, in Columbus, called out, “All right, Buckeyes, we need you.”

His campaign had buses nearby, ready to ferry students or other supporters to registration centers.

As Obama wooed Ohio State University students here and Romney focused on the Democratic bastion of Cuyahoga County to the north, there were signs the president’s Ohio advantage was narrowing.

A new CNN poll showed Obama leading Romney 51 percent to 47 percent among likely Ohio voters. And Republican strategists familiar with Romney’s internal polling contended the race was even closer — within a single percentage point — as the candidate enjoyed a post-debate surge.

“I promise you he’s back in the game in Ohio,” said Charlie Black, an informal Romney campaign adviser.

Like other Republicans, he credits Romney’s strong debate appearance last week as the reason for an uptick in national polling. And Romney advisers maintain they’re seeing evidence of that in the battleground states most likely to decide the election, Ohio among them.

“There isn’t any question that he has breathed new life and new energy into the Republican Party,” Ohio Gov. John Kasich said Tuesday on a conference call with reporters. “We’re seeing that there is greater intensity among Republicans and a great willingness to get out and vote and participate than we’re seeing with Democrats.”

With a hefty 18 electoral votes, Ohio is such a key state for Romney that one top adviser has dubbed it “the ball game” as the Republican looks to string together enough state victories to amass the 270 Electoral College votes needed to take the White House.

No Republican has won the presidency without this Midwestern state, and if Romney were to lose here, he would have to carry every other battleground state but tiny New Hampshire.

from 1A

Locals have dubbed the event the “Thrill in the ’Ville II,” a nod to the town’s role hosting another vice presidential debate in 2000.

The legal flow of alcohol probably is the biggest change in Danville since the 2000 debate between vice presidential candidates Dick Cheney and Joe Lieberman. Back then, alcohol sales were banned in the town.

On a recent day, arborist Amra Boanerges was busy trimming downtown trees. Visitors will feel welcome, he said, in a place where residents wave and honk their car horns at friends and acquaintances.

Nearby, a crew painted a new crosswalk on the pavement between the debate site and media center. Amid the manicured lawns and gardens on campus was one stark reminder of the debate’s security implications: concrete barriers were aligned along portions of campus.

Volunteers also have been pitching in behind the scenes. Hundreds gathered in the media center to text, make calls and surf the Internet, testing the digital network’s capacity for reporters preparing to cover debate night.

Businesses are sporting red, white and blue bunting. Fire hydrants are decked in the same patriotic colors. Debate flags flutter along the tree-lined downtown.

Family-owned Melton’s Great American Deli is hoping for a windfall as it caters debate-related events and provides hot dogs and snacks for a debate festival on Centre’s campus.

“It’ll take a lot of stress off paying the bills,” said Nathan Schepman, son-in-law of the deli’s owners.

Local motels are cashing in. Comfort Suites has been booked solid for debate week for months, said front desk manager Patsy Cook. Some people will stay as far away as Lexington, about 40 miles north.

Politically inspired merchandise adorns some shop windows. At Maple Tree Gallery, there are scarves, tea towels, porcelain plates and stuffed donkeys and elephants. Gallery co-owner Julie Nelson said she spent hundreds of dollars stocking up. It’s strictly bipartisan.

“We try to keep our political thoughts till after 5:30 when we close,” she said. “We don’t want to offend anyone.”

Centre’s campus has changed since the 2000 debate. Stately brick classroom buildings have been renovated and expanded. New residence halls have been built and new athletic fields opened.

School officials say favorable publicity from the 2000 debate was key to the construction boom.

Centre raised nearly $170 million in a fundraising campaign that was planned well before the first debate but didn’t start until 2003. Applications from would-be students rose about 20 percent in the year after the 2000 debate, and out-of-state applications have steadily increased since.

“Hosting the 2000 debate ushered in a decade of unprecedented progress in the life of the college,” said Richard Trollinger, a Centre vice president and a key organizer as the school’s debate co-chairman.

The connection to national politics is important for the profile of the 1,340-student school, which lacks big-time athletics or research. Centre was chosen by the Commission on Presidential Debates.

Centre ranked 52nd nationally among liberal arts colleges in the latest ratings from U.S. News & World Report, but it ranked fifth in best undergraduate teaching and alumni giving.

Now the school is planning an even more ambitious round of fundraising.

The campaign likely will begin next year and end in 2018, some three weeks before the school celebrates the 200th anniversary of its founding, Trollinger said.

“It’s our way of saying that Centre College is ready to play on the national stage,” he said.

At Melton’s deli, where Schepman was serving up sandwiches during a recent lunch rush in the converted gas station, the hope is that debate-related business will guarantee a positive balance sheet.

“We won’t be going into 2013, hopefully, in the hole,” Schepman said.

Giants edge Reds 2-1 to stay alive

■ Error by Rolen in 10th inning allows the winning run to score

By Joe Kay
Associated Press

CINCINNATI—Hardly able to get a hit, the San Francisco Giants used a misplayed grounder to prolong their NL playoff series.

Third baseman Scott Rolen's two-out error in the 10th inning gave the Giants the go-ahead run Tuesday night in a 2-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds, who couldn't shake 17 years of home postseason futility.

The Giants avoided a sweep in Game 3, cutting their division series deficit to 2-1.

Rolen, an eight-time Gold Glove winner, couldn't come up with Joaquin Arias' short-hop grounder, bobbled it and threw late to first.

"I've gone through the play many times in my mind between then and now, and I think I would play it the same way," Rolen said. "It hit my glove. I just couldn't get it to stick."

The Giants managed only three hits against Homer Bailey and Reds relievers, but got two of them in the 10th — along with a passed ball by Ryan Hanigan — to pull it out. San Francisco won despite striking out 16 times.

"We kept scratching and clawing down two games to none," reliever Jeremy Affeldt said. "That's the way it is in the playoffs."

Cincinnati finished with four hits, just one after the first inning.

Zito will pitch Game 4 on Wednesday for the Giants, who have won the last 11 times he started. The Reds have to decide whether to try ace Johnny Cueto, forced out of the opener in San Francisco on Saturday with spasms in his back and side.

Manager Dusty Baker said after the game that they hadn't decided whether to let Cueto try it, bring back Mat Latos on short rest again, or replace Cueto with Mike Leake, who wasn't on the division series roster.

Replacing Cueto would leave the Reds ace ineligible to pitch in the championship series should the Reds get that far.

The Reds haven't won a home playoff game since 1995, the last time they reached the NL championship series. One win away from making it back there, they couldn't beat a Giants team that has barely been able to get a hit.

Didn't need many in this one.

Bailey made his first start at Great American Ball Park since his Sept. 28 no-hitter in Pittsburgh and allowed only one hit in seven innings, the latest dominating performance by a Reds starter. Marco Scutaro singled in the sixth for the only hit off Bailey.

Fortunately for the Giants, Bailey's one lapse let to a run. He hit a batter, walked another and gave up a sacrifice fly by Angel Pagan in the third inning.

That was it until the 10th, with the Giants going down swinging — the Reds set a season high for strikeouts. Closer Aroldis Chapman got a pair of strikeouts on 100 mph fastballs during a perfect ninth inning, keeping it tied at 1.

San Francisco's one-hit wonders finally got it going against Jonathan Broxton, who gave up leadoff singles by Buster Posey — the NL batting champion — and Hunter Pence, who pulled his left calf on a wild swing before getting his hit.

With two outs, Hanigan couldn't come up with a pitch, letting the runners advance. Arias' tough-chance grounder then put Rolen in a tough spot — charging the ball for a quick short-hop swipe. He couldn't come up with it cleanly, and Arias beat the throw.

Cols blank Braves to take title

■ HCHS rolls past Union Co. 10-0 to claim district crown

By Mitchell Stinson
Gleaner correspondent

Fans had to wonder what coach Benson Pryor was complaining about on Tuesday.

Taking a 5-0 lead into the break, his Henderson County Colonels soccer team had dominated the first half of its Sixth District Tournament championship game against Union County. Yet there he was, demanding better effort from the Colonels on their home field.

But his point was proven by a quick scoring barrage that ended the contest, courtesy of the mercy rule. Kaelin Hildreth applied the exclamation point, lining one into the net that made it 10-0 in the ninth minute of the second half.

"The guys worked harder, they pushed the tempo and that led to opportunities," Pryor said. "That's why it took 40 minutes to score the first five and nine minutes to score the second five."

Alec Calvert stuffed the stat sheet with three goals and two assists. He gave Henderson its first lead in the fourth minute, when he dribbled deep down the right side, closed on the near post and drilled a short shot off a defender, into the net.

Five minutes later, he took a short chip pass from

Nick Gregory and headed the ball home from close range. Henderson hit paydirt two more times in the next six minutes, then scored only once over the last 25 minutes of the half.

Even when goals were coming at regular intervals, coach Pryor lamented a lack of overall energy.

"I think we were kind of flat in the first half," he said.

Not a trace of flatness was detected after halftime, however. Swarming the Braves goal, the home team struck early and often. Calvert started the barrage with a goal in the opening minute, then Hildreth, James Bickers and Jacob O'Nan struck in quick succession.

When the dust cleared, there were still more than 30 minutes on the clock but they couldn't be played. The 10-goal mercy rule prevented further damage.

Hildreth and Miguel Velazquez finished with two scores apiece, while Noah Mills, James Bickers, and Jacob O'Nan contributed single goals. At the other end, Henderson defenders saw little action.

The Braves' first offensive threat came in the 30th minute and they had only one more the rest of the game. Neither resulted in a shot on goal.

Both teams will advance to next week's Second Region Tournament, which will begin Monday at Colonel Field.

Battered Kentucky is playing 26 freshmen

By Gary Graves
Associated Press

LEXINGTON — Kentucky's freshmen are experiencing an extended orientation as the Wildcats battle through what has been an injury-plagued season.

Injuries have forced the Wildcats to play 26 so far. Kentucky has played 14 true freshmen, that ranks in the top five nationally.

Three — quarterback Jalen Whitlow, cornerback Cody Quinn and punter Landon Foster — will start Saturday at Arkansas (2-4, 1-2 Southeastern Conference).

While youth partly explains Kentucky's start (1-5, 0-3 SEC), the youngsters are also making significant contributions.

Foster is ninth among SEC punters; Whitlow and fellow freshmen QB Patrick Towles (now injured) led scoring drives last week against No. 19 Mississippi State; Quinn will make his fourth straight start.

The situation has resulted in a quick, but sometimes painful, maturation process.

"You know what? It's a great opportunity for a lot of younger guys and it's kind of an eye-opening experience being thrust into action and having no other choice," said starting left guard Zach West, a redshirt freshman. "It's definitely getting guys to grow up a lot quicker."

Freshmen have seen time on both sides of the ball, though the offense has experienced its share of changes lately. Especially at quarterback, where Whitlow will play his third straight game and make his second consecutive start.

He started the season on third string before becoming the backup with senior Morgan Newton's move to H-back. Sophomore Maxwell Smith's ankle injury two weeks ago changed everything, moving Whitlow into the starter's role last week with a plan of alternating with Towles.

Towles' sprained right ankle sustained before halftime of the 27-14 loss has changed the plan again. The latest depth chart lists Whitlow, Newton and freshman Jeff Witthuhn, a walk-on.

Though Whitlow gives the Wildcats some continuity, he knows only half the playbook and the coaches are hoping he stays healthy to avoid using another alternative.

Lady Cols top Union for district crown

Henderson County was finally able to free itself from the clutches of Union County's defense to claim a 5-0 victory in Tuesday's title game of the Sixth District Tournament.

The Bravettes (10-8) sent nine defenders back in an effort to clog up the passing lanes and keep the Lady Colonels off the board.

"They did what they had to do," Henderson County coach Doc DeWitt said. "We were trying to find the gaps and seams. When we did in the first half, we were taking quick shots instead of taking careful shots."

Despite having numerous shots in first half with many of them corralled by Union County goalkeeper Mallory Warmack, who totaled 19 saves, the Lady Colonels were held scoreless for the first 33 minutes.

goal, coming from her defensive position by dribbling through the defense and toward the goal. After making the defender commit, Zeron dropped a pass low to Maddie Gish, who scored the first of her two goals with 6:46 left in the half.

"Getting that first goal was key," DeWitt said.

Still Henderson County was clinging to a 1-0 lead at the half.

"When we played in the regular season, they scored their first goal in the first 40 seconds. For it to be 1-0 at the half was an accomplishment for us," Union County coach Dustin Winslow said.

Set pieces helped the Lady Colonels expand the lead in the second half. Christin Poole headed in a corner kick by Emma Newland 7:21 into the second half.

The score remained 2-0 until Henderson County scored three goals in the final 16:00. Hannah Buley hooked in a crossing shot from the right side of the goal at the 64:22 mark. Gish followed with her second goal on another corner kick from Newland for her second assist. Julia Mathews rounded out the scoring on an assist from Poole with 4:34 to play.

Both teams will advance to next week's Second Region Tournament with Union County making its first region appearance in school history. The regional will likely begin Monday and is scheduled to be hosted by Trigg County.

Jets' many flaws clear in their loss to Texans

Wire reports

Mark Sanchez had his moments — good and bad — for the Jets. Tim Tebow, too.

But some of the Jets' biggest flaws were on full display in their 23-17 loss to the Houston Texans. They couldn't run the ball, the defense couldn't stop the run and Tebow still isn't running on the field much.

And now, the Jets are running out of answers.

"We could've won, we should've won," wide receiver Chaz Schilens said Monday night. "We got in the way of ourselves again. Sooner or later, we'll fix it."

At least that's the hope for a New York team that's 2-3, but feels an awful lot worse than that. After all, this is a franchise that once had its coach guaranteeing Super Bowls, a team known for spunk and swagger. That's not so much the case these days as some players spoke as if Monday night was a moral victory.

"It was a lot of courage, a lot of effort that we showed," Tebow said. "It wasn't always perfect and we always didn't execute the way we want to, but you can never question our toughness or our effort or our character."

The Jets' performance was certainly better than what they showed in a 34-0 drubbing against the San Francisco 49ers last week. But plenty of questions remain for the Jets, who lost for the first time to the Texans.

"We helped them," a weary sounding coach Rex Ryan said on a conference call Tuesday, about 10 hours after the loss. "We made a mistake and they made the plays. That's a good football team. Obviously, you can't help them, and that's the disappointing thing to me."

■ Houston Texans line-backer Brian Cushing is out for the season with a torn ligament in his left knee.

Cushing was hurt in the second quarter of the Texans' 23-17 win over the New York Jets on a low block by guard Matt Slauson. Cushing walked off the field on his own, but didn't return.

Coach Gary Kubiak said Tuesday that Cushing has a torn anterior cruciate ligament and will need surgery.

Tim Dobbins moved into Cushing's spot in the lineup, and finished with four tackles and a pass deflection.

The Texans (5-0) play Green Bay (2-3) in Houston on Sunday night.

■ NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell upheld the suspensions of Jonathan Vilma and Will Smith on Tuesday for their role in the New Orleans Saints bounty scandal and reduced penalties for Scott Fujita and Anthony Hargrove.

Vilma will sit out the entire season and Smith's punishment stands at four games.

Hargrove, a free agent defensive lineman, will face a two-game suspension once he signs with a team. He originally was hit with eight games, but that was reduced to seven with five games already served. Fujita, who plays for Cleveland, will now miss only one game instead of three.

■ The unbeaten Houston Texans have tightened their grip on the top spot in the AP Pro32 NFL power rankings, with Indianapolis making the biggest gain after its upset of Green Bay.

The Texans improved to 5-0 with a 23-17 win over the New York Jets on Monday night. They received 10 of the 12 first-place votes and 382 points Tuesday from the 12-person panel of media members who regularly cover the NFL.

It's Cards, Nats in Game 3

■ With Strasburg out, Jackson will take the mound vs. Carpenter

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Stephen Strasburg joined his teammates for an off-day workout at Nationals Park on Tuesday, red socks pulled nearly up to his knees while tossing baseballs in the outfield a day before the first postseason game in the nation's capital in 79 years.

That's about the extent of activity these days for Strasburg as the Washington Nationals carry on without their acknowledged ace, shut down a month ago.

The NL East champions' opponent right now, the St. Louis Cardinals, are very much counting on their returning ace, Chris Carpenter, who has pitched only 17 innings all year. Carpenter will be on the mound Wednesday afternoon for Game 3 of the NL division series, facing Washington's Edwin Jackson. The best-of-five series is tied at 1.

The 37-year-old Carpenter had surgery in July for a nerve problem that left his throwing arm and much of the right side of his body numb. He came back on Sept. 21, and is 0-2 with a 3.71 ERA in three starts.

"Everybody knows that it wasn't supposed to happen," Carpenter said about the prospect of pitching at all in 2012. "I put a lot of work into it, to hopefully have this opportunity. I didn't know if I was going to have this opportunity or not — and fortunately, I do."

He is 9-2 with a 3.05 ERA in the postseason for his career.

That includes going 4-0 with a 3.25 ERA last year while helping St. Louis win the World Series; he beat the Texas Rangers in Game 7 for the title.

"Him winning the World Series last year or whenever isn't going to do anything for him tomorrow," Nationals third baseman Ryan Zimmerman said. "He's a great pitcher, and nobody's taking anything away from him in that aspect, but tomorrow we're going to go out there with our plan and try and do what we've done all year."

Which was good enough

Washington Nationals center fielder Bryce Harper collides with Drake LaRoche, 10, son of first baseman Adam LaRoche, in the outfield while shagging balls during a workout before Game 3 of the National League division series against the St. Louis Cardinals on Tuesday in Washington.

to own the best record in the major leagues at 98-64.

Strasburg played a key role up until his final start, a three-inning outing on Sept. 7. The No. 1 overall pick in the 2009 amateur draft went 15-6 with a 3.16 ERA with 197 strikeouts in 159 1-3 innings.

General manager Mike Rizzo made quite clear all season that his prized right-hander's innings would be limited in his first full season back from Sept. 3, 2010, reconstructive elbow surgery.

"I bet the kid has to be going crazy, being in the situation where he is," said Cardinals right fielder Carlos Beltran, who hit two of his team's four homers Monday in Game 2. "He pitched all regular season, and right now he's not available for them."

Unable to put Strasburg on the mound now, the Nationals used playoff rookies Gio Gonzalez and Jordan Zimmermann in Games 1 and 2.

"The starting pitching, we showed a little inexperience there," manager Davey Johnson said. "I mean, not going right after hitters — and also not pitching."

Washington now needs to rebound from that 12-4 loss in Game 2 at St. Louis, although the Nationals prefer to focus on having taken one of their two road games at the outset of the series.

Ailing Garcia removed from Cards' roster

Wire reports

The St. Louis Cardinals removed Jaime Garcia from their NL division series roster Tuesday, a day after he lasted only two innings in his Game 2 start because of an ailing shoulder.

An MRI revealed that the left-hander has a strained rotator cuff and inflammation in his throwing shoulder. He'll be replaced by rookie right-hander Shelby Miller.

Garcia's health was a concern after he missed two months this season with shoulder fatigue before returning in mid-August. Manager Mike Matheny dismissed suggestions that Garcia should have spoken up about a possible problem before starting a playoff game.

"He went back and forth just like every guy does," Matheny said. "You don't know exactly how you're going to feel until you get out there. There are times you don't feel good, and I know that we have had some pitchers wondering if they can make pitch one, and next thing you know they are standing on top of the mound in the eighth inning."

"I respect these guys' preparation that they have going into a game, how they push through things, and try and make something out of nothing at times. If you waited around until you felt perfect, you would never play this game."

Despite Garcia's short outing, the Cardinals won Monday's game 12-4 to even the series at one game apiece. Game 3 is Wednesday in Washington.

Lance Lynn, who pitched three innings in relief and picked up the Game 2 win, will take Garcia's spot in the rotation if the Cardinals advance to the next round.

■ Johnny Cueto's bad back left the Cincinnati Reds unsure who would start Game 4 against the San Francisco Giants.

The Reds' 19-game winner had to leave the first inning of the divisional series opener Saturday because of back spasms. Mat Latos and the bullpen took over and pulled off a 5-2 win.

If Cueto is hurt, the Reds have a few options. They could replace him on the division series roster with right-hander Mike Leake, who was left off. That would leave Cueto unavailable to pitch during the league championship series if the Reds make it that far.

"We're seeing if we can avoid it because he wouldn't be available the next series," manager Dusty Baker said. "But if it's unavoidable, that's something different. We're weighing our options right now."

Yanks star A-Rod still struggling at the plate

By Howie Rumberg
Associated Press

NEW YORK — For all of his home runs, All-Star accolades and huge salaries, Alex Rodriguez finds himself in a most familiar spot this season.

A-Rod is an October lightning rod.

With every swing and miss, memories of his amazing run during the New York Yankees' championship season in 2009 fade even further. Instead, fans are becoming more and more vocal, calling for manager Joe Girardi to drop him from the No. 3 spot in the lineup.

Rodriguez struck out to end the Yankees' 3-2 loss to the Baltimore Orioles in Game 2 of their division series Monday night, leaving the best-of-five matchup tied at 1.

He's fanned plenty of times — five in all while going 1 for 9 so far in the series.

"I feel fine at the plate," Rodriguez said after the loss. "I've just got to finish at-bats. I'm getting good swings."

He'll have the chance to turn things around Wednesday night when the series shifts to the Bronx for Game 3. Hiroki Kuroda (16-11) starts for New York against Miguel Gonzalez (9-4), a rookie right-hander who has 17 strikeouts in 13 2-3 innings against the Yankees in two starts.

After their train experienced an electrical outage after the loss Monday and turned a usual 2-hour, 15-minute trip to New York into a 5-hour journey, manager Joe Girardi was reluctant to address the Yankees' more pressing power problem Tuesday.

"I think that we're going to do whatever it takes to win this three-game series. Nothing that we do will be something that is just a knee-jerk reaction," Girardi said. "The great thing about this is I have a great group of guys that's very unselfish, and they really want to win. And that's what we're going to do, what we think is best to win."

Always protective of his players, Girardi might be choosing to coddle Rodriguez after watching Joe Torre cause a stir in 2006 by dropping the 14-time All-Star to eighth in the Yankees order against the Detroit Tigers in the first round.

"Sometimes it's just not as easy as just writing a name or taking a guy out, a pitcher out. You have to think about the emotional part," Girardi said. "You always have to think about that as a manager."

A big fan of the numbers, all collated in his ever-present binder, Girardi need not look too deep to see that the 37-year-old Rodriguez is not the same player that has amassed 647 homers, fewer than only Willie Mays, Babe Ruth, Hank Aaron and Barry Bonds.

Injured Nadal hopes to return soon

By Steven Wine
Associated Press

Rafael Nadal is eager to trade in his backstroke for his backhand.

Swimming as part of his rehabilitation from a left knee injury, Nadal said he has been more encouraged recently about his progress and hopes to resume practice soon. He didn't rule out playing next month in the ATP World Tour Finals or Davis Cup final, but added that such a quick return would be difficult.

"I don't want to put any goals to play a tournament," Nadal said Tuesday. "I want to go day by day. I go every day to the gym and the swimming pool to continue with my recovery. I am trying to not think that far."

Nadal spoke from his home in Mallorca during a conference call to promote his participation in an exhibition in New York in March. He has also said he'll enter an exhibition in Abu Dhabi in late December.

The 11-time Grand Slam champion hasn't played since losing in the second round of Wimbledon in June. A partially torn patella tendon forced him to miss the Olympics, where he was the defending gold medalist, and the U.S. Open, where he was the 2010 champion and 2011 runner-up.

After deciding against surgery, Nadal was at first discouraged about how he responded to his rehabilitation regimen.

"I am feeling a little bit better now than the first couple of months," he said. "It has been very, very tough for me because I feel my knee didn't improve in the right direction, but today is something different. The last couple of weeks the improvement of my knee is something I really can feel."

Because of his long layoff, Nadal figures he'll likely need to hit balls for several weeks at least before he returns to competition. The biggest remaining events this year are the ATP World Tour Finals in London Nov. 5-12 and Spain's Davis Cup final against the Czech Republic Nov. 16-18.

The unbeaten take aim at Tide

■ Contenders, pretenders and BCS busters remain on the list

By Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press

At this point in the season, it looks as if the rest of the country is competing to be the team that plays No. 1 Alabama for the BCS championship in January.

The mere suggestion of that is probably enough to make Nick Saban's head explode, but between the way the Crimson Tide has played and what's left on its schedule you have to like Alabama's chances.

There are 13 other undefeated teams in major college football after a sort'em out weekend in which seven teams took their first loss. As many as eight teams could finish the season unbeaten. That'd make for one big BCS mess, but the odds are it will be far fewer.

So it's a good time to sort through the contenders and figure out which ones have the best chance to either play Alabama in Miami — or keep the Tide from getting there.

MIAMI OR BUST
■ No. 2 Oregon (6-0)
So far: The Ducks haven't been challenged yet after facing a weak nonconference schedule and playing only one game away from Autzen Stadium. Coach Chip Kelly's team is outscoring opponents by 32.
Key remaining games: at No. 11 USC (Nov. 3); No. 17 Stanford (Nov. 17); at No. 10 Oregon State (Nov. 24).

Forecast: That's a tough road, especially if the Ducks have to play the Trojans again in the Pac-12 title game, but this might be Kelly's best team yet.
■ No. 7 Notre Dame (5-0)
So far: LB Manti Te'o and the Fighting Irish have allowed three touchdowns, fewest in the nation, and while they haven't faced another elite team, they have faced a bunch of solid ones.
Key remaining games: No. 17 Stanford (Oct. 13); at

No. 13 Oklahoma (Oct. 27); at No. 11 USC (Nov. 24).
Forecast: It's hard to imagine the Irish staying undefeated against that schedule, but if they do they'll have as good a resume as any team in the country.

BIG 12 BIG BOYS
■ No. 5 West Virginia (5-0)
So far: QB Geno Smith has taken hold of the Heisman Trophy race and the Mountaineers have no doubt been the most exciting team in the country.
Key remaining games: at Texas Tech (Oct. 13); No. 6 Kansas State (Oct. 20); Oklahoma (Nov. 17).
■ No. 6 Kansas State (5-0)
So far: The Wildcats won at Oklahoma and have been prolific in a more methodical way than their souped-up Big 12 rivals.

Key remaining games: at Iowa State (Oct. 13); at West Virginia (Oct. 20); Texas (Dec. 1).
Forecast: The Big 12 is the most balanced conference in the country, and while the Mountaineers and Wildcats are the hot teams in the league, just about every game they play figures to be a challenge. And that's no way to stay undefeated.

BLOCKING BAMA
■ No. 3 South Carolina (6-0)
So far: The Gamecocks' 35-7 victory against Georgia on Saturday might have been the most impressive performance of the season.
Key remaining games: at LSU (Oct. 13); at Florida (Oct. 20); at Clemson (Nov. 24).
■ No. 4 Florida (5-0)
So far: The Gators have been transformed into a rugged, Bama-like team under coach Will Muschamp. Three times they have rallied in the second half to win.

Key remaining games: South Carolina (Oct. 20); vs. Georgia (Oct. 27); at Florida State (Nov. 24).
Forecast: It's doubtful the Beavers will get to the Civil War undefeated, but they might be able to ruin the Ducks' title hopes. The Oregon defender Avery Patterson runs for a touchdown after intercepting a pass during the first half of last Saturday's game against Washington in Eugene, Ore.

Forecast: If South Carolina can get through a brutal stretch and to a matchup with Alabama in the SEC title game, Steve Spurrier's team looks to be the best equipped in the conference to beat the Tide. Though how much will the Gamecocks have left in the tank by the time they get to Gainesville?

BEAVERS AND BULLDOGS
■ No. 10 Oregon State (4-0)
So far: The surprising Beavers have one of the best passing games in the country, but QB Sean Mannion is now out indefinitely with a knee injury.
Key remaining games: at BYU (Oct. 13); at Stanford (Nov. 10); Oregon (Nov. 24).
■ No. 19 Mississippi State (5-0)
So far: The Bulldogs are off to their best start since 1999, but the only team with a winning record they have played is Troy. And they almost lost.

Key remaining games: at Alabama (Oct. 27); Texas A&M (Nov. 3); at LSU (Nov. 10).
Forecast: It's doubtful the Beavers will get to the Civil War undefeated, but they might be able to ruin the Ducks' title hopes. The Bulldogs still have a lot to prove.

BEASTS OF THE EAST
■ No. 18 Louisville (5-0)
So far: QB Teddy Bridgewater and the offense have been as good as advertised.
Key remaining games: Cincinnati (Oct. 26); at Rutgers (Nov. 29).
■ No. 20 Rutgers (5-0)
So far: Feisty defense and RB Jawan Jamison runs for 100 yards every week.
Key remaining games: at Cincinnati (Nov. 17); Louisville (Nov. 29).
■ No. 21 Cincinnati (4-0)
So far: The Bearcats best win is against Virginia Tech, which isn't what it used to be.
Key remaining games: at Louisville (Oct. 26); Rutgers (Nov. 17).
Forecast: The Big East race figures to be fun, especially if these three can avoid being upset in their other games. But it's hard to see any of them making it through the season unbeaten.

BCS BUSTERS
■ No. 23 Louisiana Tech (5-0)
So far: The Bulldogs are the best team most of the country hasn't seen, averaging 53 points per game.

Key remaining games: vs. Texas A&M (Oct. 13); Utah State (Nov. 17); at San Jose State (Nov. 24).
■ Ohio (6-0)
So far: Four wins by 10 points or less.
Key remaining games: at Miami, Ohio (Oct. 27); at Kent State (Nov. 23).
Forecast: If La Tech can beat Texas A&M, it's on the fast-track to becoming the third Western Athletic Conference team, along with Boise State and Hawaii, to earn an automatic BCS bid — and leave the conference. As for the Bobcats from the Mid-American Conference, their last four games are on a Thursday, a Thursday, a Wednesday and a Friday. MACtion at its best.

AUBURN'S ISSUES
At least for a week, Arkansas' John L. Smith isn't the SEC coach catching the most grief. Auburn's Gene Chizik has taken his place.
The Tigers bottomed out, at least they hope, Saturday in a 24-7 loss to Arkansas. The Razorbacks came in with the worst defense in the conference and recorded eight sacks and five takeaways. Chizik apologized for his team's performance.

Gamecocks are focused on LSU, not Georgia win

By Pete Iacobelli
Associated Press

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Coach Steve Spurrier says No. 3 South Carolina has high goals for this season and several are much bigger than starting 6-0 or dominating Georgia.
The Gamecocks (6-0, 4-0 Southeastern Conference) moved to their highest ranking in 28 years — and into discussions about SEC and national titles — after their 35-7 victory over the Bulldogs this past Saturday.
South Carolina had one of the more complete performances of Spurrier's eight seasons. None of it, Spurrier reminded people Tuesday, will matter if the Gamecocks don't stay focused on their next challenge, playing at No. 9 LSU on Saturday night.

“We are getting some national attention,” the coach said. “That's what we all like, but it can turn south on you if you don't watch it.”
Spurrier knows that too well. South Carolina pulled off a stunning upset of then No. 1 Alabama, 35-21, in October of 2010. A game later, the Gamecocks blew an 18-point halftime lead to lose at Kentucky, 31-28.

Spurrier blames himself and his staff for not coaching very well after halftime.
“Our guys were ready to play, ready to play,” he said. “We had them up 28-10 and pooped around the second half.”
It's easy to lose focus when so many people are praising the Gamecocks, which is happening all around South Carolina's campus.
Safety D.J. Swearinger said a teacher asked him to the front of the room so his nearly 200 classmates could applaud him for South Carolina's Georgia win.

That's heady stuff for a team not used to big-time success. But Swearinger said neither his head, nor those of his teammates, will be turned by the attention.
Swearinger told the defensive players at Monday's practice they could not afford to dwell on last week's victory, not with an angry bunch of LSU Tigers ahead.
“We've got a bigger task at hand than Kentucky” two years ago, Swearinger said.
LSU, the defending

SEC champions, hope to rebound from its first loss of the season, 14-6, at No. 4 Florida last Saturday. Tigers coach Les Miles said the players want to quickly put the defeat behind and get back to winning.
“For the first time in a year and a half we are talking about regular-season loss,” Miles said. “And it is miserable for us.”
South Carolina has struggled, like many SEC teams, against LSU. The Gamecocks are 1-4-1 against the Tigers since joining the league in 1992, their only victory at Death Valley coming 18 years ago.

Kelly wants undefeated, No. 7 Irish to stick to plan

By Tom Coyne
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — The first Notre Dame game linebacker Manti Te'o can remember watching on television was the last time ESPN's College Gameday was on campus. He was thrilled by the finish.
Unfortunately for Irish fans, though, Te'o was a Southern California fan back then and the play Te'o was cheering was the “Bush Push,” when USC quarterback Matt Leinart spun off one tackle and stumbled into the end zone after a shove by tailback Reggie Bush to beat Notre Dame 34-31 in Charlie Weis' first season as coach.

A lot has happened since that game in 2005, most of it not good from the Irish perspective. ESPN hasn't had much reason to consider South Bend as a College Gameday site. That's changing this season as the Irish are ranked No. 7, there's growing hope among fans they might be able to compete for a national championship and the media spotlight grows brighter on South Bend with each Irish victory. There's a sense of anticipation around campus that hasn't been felt since the Irish nearly beat top-ranked USC in that game seven years ago.

Coach Brian Kelly is telling his players not to pay attention to all the excitement, instead telling them to stick to his plan of focusing on the next opponent.
“I've worked this plan for a number of years. I've had great success with it. If they choose to continue to follow it they're going to continue to have success,” he said. “It's the trust element of staying focused on what we can handle and what we need to handle and we will be fine.”

It's the same plan Kelly used when Grand Valley State went 14-0 in 2002 and won a national championship, when the spotlight shining on the program came from the Detroit media. It's the plan he used in leading Cincinnati to a 12-0 start in 2009, before accepting the Notre Dame job.
Kelly talks weekly with the players about the distractions. So far, they appear to be heeding his advice. Te'o has said repeatedly the Irish believe in Kelly's mantra of using every practice to get better and focusing on the task at hand.
“I think our team has done a tremendous job in following through with the expectations that we hold for ourselves and that Coach Kelly has for us,” he said. “I think that is a definite direct correlation to our success thus far in the season.”

O'Brien downplays coach of year talk

By Dan Gelston
Associated Press

He took control at Penn State in the midst of the bleakest days in its history. After four straight wins proved the Nittany Lions program could thrive in the face of scandal, coach Bill O'Brien has thrust himself into contention as an early frontrunner for national coach of the year.
Just don't tell O'Brien.
After a shaky start to his tenure — a 24-14 loss at home to Ohio — O'Brien has earned praise for the turnaround and the way he has handled the fallout of the Jerry Sandusky scandal. Sandusky, maintaining his innocence, was sentenced Tuesday to at least 30 years in prison.
O'Brien was busy at work 11 miles down the road from the courtroom, far removed from Sandusky's sentence in Bellefonte, Pa., in the child sexual abuse scandal that brought shame to Penn State and led to former coach Joe Paterno's downfall.

O'Brien has led the Nittany Lions to a 4-2 record, including four straight victories and an upset over previously unbeaten Northwestern. The win was a huge confidence boost going into the off week and propelled O'Brien into the race for coach of the year honors. Only six games into the season, and with the brunt of conference play ahead, O'Brien refused to consider the idea that he'd be in the thick of the race with stalwarts like Ohio State's Urban Meyer, Alabama's Nick Saban and Kansas State's Bill Snyder, who have their teams nestled in the top 10.
“We have Murderer's Row coming up here, starting with Iowa,” O'Brien said. “There's a lot of great coaches in this country. I've only coached six games in my whole career. That's the farthest thing from my mind.”

O'Brien has tried to keep a “business as usual” approach for the Nittany Lions as they prepare for an Oct. 20 game at Iowa (3-2). Then comes the big one — Oct. 27 at Beaver Stadium — against the Buckeyes that could have voters ready to hand O'Brien the coaching award at midfield if Penn State pulls off the upset.

TENNIS

The Henderson County Family YMCA is now taking registration for its next session of youth tennis lessons for ages 5-15 to be held on Saturday mornings starting Nov. 3 for five weeks (no classes Nov. 24). Pre-registration is required. Instructor will be certified teaching pro Brett Jones. Session fees are $30 for YMCA members and $45 for non-members. For more information or to sign up call the YMCA at 827-9622.

SOFTBALL

The Relay for Life coed softball tournament will be held Saturday, Oct. 20. Entry fee is $200. To enter call Dave Garrett at 270-577-0479.

Brescia University will hold a softball clinic on Saturday, Oct. 27, at Newman Field. Pre-registration only. Registration forms may be picked up at Newman Field. For more information call Traci Smith at 270-993-0927 or Dave Garrett at 270-577-0479.

There will be a co-ed softball tournament Oct. 13 at Atkinson Park. Entry fee is $200. Hit your own balls. For more information, call 860-8904 or 577-0675.

VOLLEYBALL

The Henderson County Family YMCA is offering men's and women's adult volleyball leagues starting Oct. 23. Players must be at least 18 years old by Oct. 23, 2012. The league will play on Tuesday nights from Oct. 23-Dec. 11 with a single elimination tournament on Dec. 18-19. All games are played in the YMCA's youth gym with game times beginning at 5:30 p.m. and running until 9:15 p.m. Cost is $175 per team. The leagues are limited to 12 women's teams and 12 men's teams. Registration deadline is Oct. 17. Schedules will be available after Oct. 19. For more information, call the YMCA at 827-9622.

RUNNING

The 2012 Columbia Sportswear Chilly Hilly 5K Race/Hike will be Nov. 3 beginning at 9 a.m. at Audubon State Park. Early registration before Oct. 22 is $30 with late registration from Oct. 23 through the day of the race at $35. Group registration for groups of eight or more is $25 per person. Check-in and registration will be from 7:30-8:30 a.m. First-place male and female runners will receive $100 cash awards. Proceeds benefit Junior Achievement. For more information, contact Tara Dixon at 860-6133 or jtdixon@bellsouth.net or visit http://westky.ja.org

China hobbles Toyota, Honda

■ Sales plunge amid anti-Japan sentiment

By Yuri Kageyama
Associated Press

TOKYO—Sales of Toyota and Honda vehicles nosedived in China during September as anti-Japanese sentiment flared over a territorial dispute that threatens to hobble what was a booming business relationship between Japan and its biggest export market.

Toyota Motor Corp. said Tuesday that sales of new vehicles in China dropped 48.9 percent in September from a year earlier to 44,100 vehicles.

Honda Motor Co. said September sales plunged 40.5 percent to 33,931 vehicles. China sales for Nissan Motor Co. slid 35.3 percent last month to 76,100 vehicles.

The stunning plunge in sales comes after Japan last month nationalized tiny islands in the East

China Sea, called Senkaku in Japan and Diaoyu in China, which already had been controlled by Tokyo but also claimed by Beijing.

The move set off violent protests in China, and a widespread call to boycott Japanese goods. Toyota and Honda dealerships were burned down in one city, and crowds shouting anti-Japanese slogans have gathered and smashed Japanese cars.

Although the flare-ups have calmed in recent weeks, it still would require courage to be seen in a Japanese car in some Chinese cities.

Japanese automakers temporarily closed some of their China factories. Production is back up this week — but reduced to lower levels as demand has collapsed.

Last week, Mitsubishi Motors Corp. reported that China sales dived 63 percent to 2,340 vehicles in September. Mazda Motor Corp. said its sales in China sank 36 percent to 13,258 vehicles for the month.

A study by J.P. Morgan, released Tuesday, projected Japanese auto exports to China to crash 70 percent during the October-December period. It said the export of auto parts will slip by 40 percent — about the same drop estimated for exports of other consumer products such as electronics.

Combined, the aftermath of the territorial spat with China will shave 0.8 percentage points off Japan gross domestic product growth for the fourth quarter, sending Japan's overall economy slightly downward, instead of the initial forecast for flat growth, J.P. Morgan said.

China, with its growing middle class, had been one of the emerging markets that Japanese automakers were counting on to boost sales amid a long stagnation in the domestic auto market.

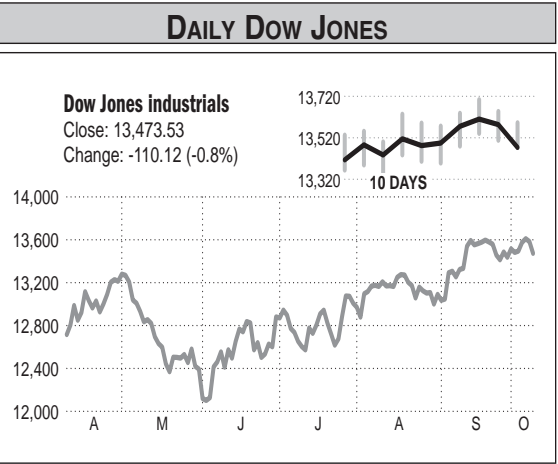

Toyota, Japan's No. 1 auto company, which makes the Prius hybrid, Camry sedan and Lexus luxury models, had planned to sell 1 million vehicles in China this calendar year.

“But that may be very difficult to achieve,” company spokesman Dion Corbett said.

International Energy Agency optimistic about Iraq's future in global oil market

By Pablo Gorondi
Associated Press

The International Energy Agency predicted Tuesday that Iraq will consolidate its position as a global oil power — allowing it to rebuild the economy of a nation ravaged by war and decades of Saddam Hussein's autocratic rule.

The leading global energy monitor reported Iraq's annual revenues from energy exports could double to an average of $200 billion annually over the next 20 years. By 2035, that optimistic scenario would make Iraq's economy the same size as that of Saudi Arabia now.

“I am optimistic about Iraq and Iraq's contribution to the global oil markets and them being able to reconstruct their country,” Fatih Birol, IEA chief economist, said in an interview with The Associated Press. “So a new, modern and prosperous country is set to emerge in the Middle East as a result of oil and gas revenues.”

The IEA is a policy adviser to 28 member countries, mostly industrialized oil consumers. The Paris-based group's predictions are important because they are seen as key benchmarks for energy markets.

In the group's “central scenario,” Iraq's oil exports are projected to grow from 3 million barrels a day now to 6.1 million barrels a day in 2020 and 8.3 million barrels a day in 2035. Iraq already is the world's third-largest oil exporter.

But the IEA said Iraq needed to sort out internal issues in order for its predictions to come true. Disputes between Iraq's central government and some regional governments regarding oil contracts must be resolved.

Among the most troublesome are the contracts awarded by the Kurdistan regional authorities for access to its rich oil fields in the north of Iraq. Federal officials in Baghdad contest those contracts.

At the same time, Iraq must complete projects to ensure water is supplied to the oil fields to assist in the extraction process. More oil export facilities also need to be completed.

Increased oil production in Iraq is also crucial for international markets, as Iraq is expected to account for nearly half of the expected growth in global oil output in the current decade, the IEA said.

“Iraq by far makes the largest contribution to global oil production growth,” Birol said. “If Iraqi production grows very slowly ... this would put upward pressure on prices.”

Wal-Mart tests same-day delivery

Wal-Mart is testing a same-day delivery service in select markets for customers who buy popular items online during the holiday shopping season.

The move comes as the world's largest retailer faces increasing competition from online giants such as Amazon.com., which is testing same-day delivery service in 10 markets. The Bentonville, Ark.-based discounter is trying to cater to Web-savvy shoppers who are demanding more convenience.

Wal-Mart's tests started this month in northern Virginia and Philadelphia, and today in Minneapolis. Wal-Mart plans to test the service in San Francisco and San Jose, Calif. later this month or in early November.

The program builds on a same-day grocery delivery launch in April 2010 in San Jose, followed by a test in San Francisco over the past year.

About 5,000 general merchandise items, including flat-panel TVs, toys and Apple iPads, will be available for the same-day option .

Tool maker selling unit for $1.4 billion

Tool maker Stanley Black & Decker Inc. is selling its hardware and home-improvement business to Spectrum Brands Holdings Inc. for $1.4 billion in cash.

The hardware and home-improvement unit makes locksets, hardware and faucets for residential use and includes brands such as Pfister, Baldwin and Kwikset.

Spectrum Brands, based in Madison, Wis., said that the acquisition will broaden its product offerings which include the Rayovac, Remington and Toastmaster brands.

Stanley Black & Decker, which is based in New Britain, said the sale is part of its ongoing strategy to diversify its revenue and geographic reach. The hardware and home-improvement unit gets 90 percent of its revenue from North America and more than 50 percent of its revenue from U.S. home-improvement stores.

Alcoa loses $143M during third quarter

Aluminum manufacturer Alcoa Inc. says it lost $143 million in the third quarter due to charges, but otherwise topped Wall Street's expectations.

Alcoa said Tuesday that the loss amounted to 13 cents per share. That compares with net income of $172 million, or 15 cents a share, a year ago.

But excluding $175 million in charges, Alcoa earned $32 million, or 3 cents per share. Analysts forecast break-even results on a per share basis.

Revenue fell to $5.83 billion from $6.42 billion but still topped analyst forecasts.

Alcoa has been challenged by the global manufacturing slowdown which hurt aluminum demand.

Alcoa is the first company in the Dow Jones industrial average to report earnings. Investors often watch its results for signs of how earnings may unfold for other companies.

Alcoa to pay $85M settlement to Alba

Alcoa is paying $85 million to settle allegations that the aluminum manufacturer and related companies paid millions in bribes that resulted in a Bahrain-controlled company overpaying for raw materials.

Alcoa and Aluminum Bahrain BSC, or Alba, announced the lawsuit settlement Tuesday.

Alcoa agreed to pay $85 million in cash to Alba without admitting liability. Separately, it resumed a long-term agreement to sell raw materials to Alba, which owns one of the largest aluminum smelters in the world.

In a statement, Alcoa said that the settlement was “the best possible outcome” and avoids the expense of litigation. Alba said the settlement released all claims against Alcoa and its related companies.

Advice

Behave like person you want to attract in relationship

Dear Amy: I am in my mid-20s and recently decided that the next time I am in a relationship, I do not want that relationship to be sexual until I am either engaged or married (in other words, until I have a ring on my finger and we are seriously committed).

I have been in sexual relationships. Friends tell me that my choice is ridiculous because I've "already had sex!" and that no man in the 21st century is going to agree to these terms.

But Amy, I made this choice because in the past when my romances became sexual, I would find myself feeling vulnerable, used and insecure afterward, and then my partners would eventually leave anyway.

But in these times, am I being ridiculous?

— Done with Premarital Sex
Dear Done: To answer your question, virginity does grow back. Figuratively, anyway.

The smartest thing to do when relationships proceed along predictable unpleasant patterns is to see what you can change, and I give you a lot of credit for recognizing this and for choosing to behave differently.

But you should also examine your relationship history to see why being sexual with someone throws you off kilter.

If being sexual transforms you from a self-confident woman into someone who feels used, vulnerable and insecure, partners will want to flee.

And if you choose the wrong partners, your vulnerabilities will surface. It's a cycle you are wise to want to break.

Basically, you need to start behaving like the person you want to attract. Men are not that different from women in that, when the time is right, they also want to have lasting and happy relationships.

I don't know if your new chastity requires that you save yourself for marriage. This will be very much up to you and the man who loves you.

Dear Amy: My fiancé and I are discussing sending out "save the date" cards for our wedding in June. He wants to somehow word it to request that people let us know as soon as possible whether they can attend the wedding.

I don't think we should. Isn't that what the invitation is for?

— Prospective Bride
Dear Bride: I agree with you.

Horoscope

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY: (Oct. 10). You'll like who enters your world this year, attracted by your remarkable drive. Stay aware. You'll follow a subtle signal to a major opportunity next month. You fit right in with a fun crowd, and by December, you'll be leading it. Your investment in education pays you back in May and again in July. Aries and Sagittarius people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 40, 3, 23, 18 and 50.

ARIES: (March 21-April 19). As you try to deal exclusively with a current circumstance, someone else is intent on bringing up the past in what appears to be a patently unhelpful way. Conflict resolution will depend on an unemotional approach.

TAURUS: (April 20-May 20). Regarding certain teachings that have been passed to you, you seriously doubt the correctness of your parents and other ancestors. And yet you respect them enough to carry out the tradition in some small way today.

GEMINI: (May 21-June 21). Wishing someone else happiness is a kind of gift. That the gift can't be seen doesn't lessen its value, especially considering today's relationship between your guiding planet and Pluto.

CANCER: (June 22-July 22). You'll have to work hard at something — i.e., you'll have to commit, challenge yourself and change in some way. You're ready for this, and so the work will be pleasure, too.

LEO: (July 23-Aug. 22). You'll be in the know in every way you need to be. When the facts aren't on the tip of your tongue, you'll have them at your fingertips. Share judiciously with only those who ask.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). If you can't say what the meaning of something is, does that make it any less meaningful? You will have a strong feeling and a connection to a physical item. It's OK to be unsure as to why.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You will find it easy to focus on what you want and ignore what you don't, namely because what you want will be in full bloom in front of you, shiny, enticing and overshadowing all else.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You'll put your family first, and this will shape your day. There will still be a small amount of time to devote to a project, and you'll succeed best following a step-by-step plan.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You enjoy studying nature and will find it interesting, beautiful, unnerving and forever insistent that there is always more to be discovered.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Those who believe in the power of serendipity seem to experience a greater number of fateful encounters than others. But even if you don't believe, today's instance of kismet is undeniably remarkable.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You may feel happy to go along with things the way they are, but a seemingly small incident this afternoon makes it impossible to do so. This shapes the future you in some small way.

PISCES: (Feb. 19-March 20). You adore another person and want to give everything you have to the relationship. You do not wish to be dependent on the other person for anything, though, not even for love.

Broccoli's a vegetable worth a try

Dear Readers: Broccoli is showing up in more and more grocery stores. With long stalks and florets on top that resemble broccoli, it looks like a hybrid of broccoli and asparagus. However, it actually is a natural hybrid of broccoli and Chinese kale.

It's found in many produce sections, and it costs a little more than broccoli. With a very subtle, sweet flavor and a touch of pepper flavor as well, the entire vegetable can be eaten either raw or cooked. It definitely is a vegetable worth trying, especially since it is available year-round.

— Heloise
Dear Heloise: Cookie

cutters can look messy floating in drawers, and can pose a safety hazard for kids if they aren't stored correctly. I have found that a simple way to store them is to stack them on a standing paper-towel holder.

It is decorative and adds a cozier feel to a kitchen when sitting out, but can be safely stored away when the kids are around!

It's never too late to learn about God

Dear Dr. Graham: I don't know anything about God, but I'd like to learn if I can. Or is it too late (I'm in my 50s)? Maybe I should have started when I was a child, but my family didn't want anything to do with religion.

— P. McG.

Dear P. McG.: No, it's never too late for you (or anyone else) to discover who God is and what He wants to do in your life — not at all. Moses was about 80 years old when he first met God, while tending sheep in the middle of the Sinai wilderness (see Acts 7:23-30).

And God wants you to discover who He is, because He loves you and wants you to love Him in return.

In fact, He actually has put within your mind and heart this desire you have to learn about Him. He wouldn't have done that if He didn't care about you or want you to come to know Him.

How can you learn about God? The key is to understand that God isn't hiding from us. Instead, He has done everything He can to make Himself known to us; all we need to do is look for Him in the right place. How has He made Himself known? One way is through the world He's created.

As the Bible says, "The heavens declare the glory of God; the skies proclaim the work of his hands" (Psalm 19:1).

But we learn about God most of all through Jesus Christ — because He was God in human flesh.

Get a modern translation of the Bible, and read through one of the Gospels (I suggest John).

When you do, you'll discover just how much God loves you, and that He wants to welcome you into His family.

Then ask Him to come into your life — and He will.

Try using sitz bath to help ease pain of hemorrhoids

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: What causes hemorrhoids? I have one that hangs out. I use hemorrhoidal cream to keep away the burning. I cannot find a doctor in the town where I live who treats hemorrhoids. What can I do to remedy it?

— R.B.

Dear R.B.: Hemorrhoids are bands of anal tissue containing arteries, veins, muscle fibers and filler material called connective tissue. What causes enlargement of hemorrhoids isn't known with certainty. Many believe that straining to eliminate hard stool promotes their formation.

When a blood clot forms in a hemorrhoid, that's painful. Hemorrhoids often are subject to bleeding. What you have is a prolapsed hemorrhoid, one that has dropped through the anal opening.

Some measures that alleviate the discomfort of hemorrhoids are sitz baths. You sit in a tub with warm water that reaches to the halfway mark on your buttocks, and stay there for 15 minutes. Bring your heels as close to your buttocks as you comfortably can. Do this twice a day.

Keep your stool soft by increasing your intake of fiber. If you can't get enough fiber from your diet, then get a product like Metamucil, which can be found in all drugstores. Continue using your hemorrhoid cream.

There's got to be a doctor who treats hemorrhoids in your town. I looked up the population; it would support more than one doctor. A family doctor treats hemorrhoids.

A surgeon is bound to practice in your town. If not, see your family doctor and ask him for the nearest surgeon if the family doctor thinks you need one.

Doctors can get rid of hemorrhoids like yours in many ways. One is to slip a special rubber band around the hemorrhoid with a device that is easily used. The rubber band deprives the hemorrhoid of its blood supply, and in a short time it sloughs off. Many other procedures for dealing with hemorrhoids are available.

Dr. Paul Donohue will be retiring at the end of 2012. Dr. Keith Roach will share the byline during the transition period and assume sole authorship of "To Your Good Health" beginning in January. Readers may write the doctors or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Festival successful despite controversy

The organizer of a festival in Western Kentucky that honors bluegrass music pioneer Bill Monroe says the event was successful — despite a legal battle over using Monroe's name and likeness.

Campbell Mercer told the Messenger-Inquirer that around 15,000 fans had attended the Jerusalem Ridge Bluegrass Celebration that began last Thursday and lasted through the weekend.

A court had stopped Mercer from using Monroe's likeness or name to promote the festival, which is put on to honor Monroe as the "Father of Bluegrass."

Campbell is in a dispute with Ohio County and the county industrial foundation. Those organizations lay legal claim to Monroe's name and image, having bought the usage rights from the musician's son 13 years ago. At issue is whether they gave Campbell the right to use them.

Campbell said the event still attracted fans from 47 states and at least seven different countries.

"We just saw so much support from the fans," he said. "They came to work. They wanted to help us make the festival a success."

Magician David Blaine wraps up high-voltage stunt in NYC

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Daredevil David Blaine has finished what could be called his most electrifying stunt.

The magician emerged shortly before 9 p.m. Monday after spending three days and three nights standing in the middle of 1 million volts of electric currents at New York's Pier 54.

A spokesman says Blaine was able to walk with assistance, speak and kiss fiancée Alizee Guinochet before being taken to a hospital to be examined.

The 39-year-old Blaine wore a chain-mail bodysuit as a barrier between himself and the currents, emitted by Tesla coils.

The stunt was called "Electrified: One Million Volts Always On." It was streamed on YouTube, with help from Intel Corp.

Blaine's past stunts include hanging upside down over Central Park and being encased in a block of ice.

Winner dies after roach-eating contest

The winner of a roach-eating contest in South Florida died shortly after downing dozens of the live bugs as well as worms, authorities said Monday.

About 30 contestants ate the insects during Friday night's contest at Ben Siegel Reptile Store in Deerfield Beach about 40 miles north of Miami.

The grand prize was a python.

Edward Archbold, 32, of West Palm Beach became ill shortly after the contest collapsed in front of the store, according to the Broward Sheriff's Office. He was taken to the hospital where he was pronounced dead. Authorities were waiting for results of an autopsy to determine a cause of death.

The medical examiner's office said Tuesday it has sent samples of Archbold's remains for testing, but results are not expected for another week or two.

Today in history

Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 10, the 284th day of 2012. There are 82 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 10, 1962, President John F. Kennedy, responding to the Thalidomide birth defects crisis, signed an amendment to the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act requiring pharmaceutical companies to prove that their products were safe and effective prior to marketing.

On this date:

In 1845, the U.S. Naval Academy was established in Annapolis, Md.

In 1913, the Panama Canal was effectively completed as President Woodrow Wilson sent a signal from the White House by telegraph, setting off explosives that destroyed a section of the Gamboa dike.

In 1957, President Dwight D. Eisenhower apologized to the finance minister of Ghana, Komla Agbeli Gbedemah, after the official was refused seating in a Howard Johnson's restaurant near Dover, Del.

In 1973, Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, accused of accepting bribes, pleaded no contest to one count of federal income tax evasion, and resigned his office.

Five years ago: A 14-year-old suspended student opened fire in a Cleveland high school, wounding two teachers and two classmates before killing himself.

One year ago: Albert Pujols had one of the biggest postseason nights of his career in Game 2 of the NL championship series, going 4 for 5 with a home run, three doubles and five RBIs as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Milwaukee Brewers 12-3 to even the series at 1-1.

Think about it

"I have a strong moral sense — by my standards." — Rex Stout, American writer (1886-1975).

BEST BETS

7 p.m. on 19
Arrow

Adapted from a DC Comics character, this new action drama stars Canadian actor Stephen Amell as billionaire playboy Oliver Queen, who returns home after five years as a shipwrecked castaway determined to right the wrongs of society in general and his past in particular. To that end, he creates the persona of vigilante crime fighter Arrow, which doesn't sit well with his detective father (Paul Blackthorne). Katie Cassidy and David Ramsey also star.

7 p.m. on 9 35
Nature

Conservation ecologist Chris Morgan embarks on a challenge to find and film the Siberian tiger living wild and free in Russia's far eastern forests. The new episode "Siberian Tiger Quest" features the work of Korean cameraman Sooyong Park, the first person ever to film these big cats in the wild.

8 p.m. on 14
Law & Order: Special Victims Unit

If the subject matter weren't enough, the title of this new episode, "Twenty-Five Acts," may be a clue that it's at least somewhat inspired by the "Fifty Shades of Grey" phenomenon. The young author (Anna Chlumsky) of an erotic novel with an S&M theme is date-raped by a television host (Roger Bart). Benson and Rollins (Mariska Hargitay, Kelli Giddish) urge her to file charges, but their investigation turns up information that could destroy her career.

8 p.m. on 44
Criminal Minds

When two murder victims are found within hours of each other, one in Los Angeles and one in San Diego, Rossi (Joe Mantegna) and the team suspect a pair of killers working together. Kim Wayans ("In Living Color") and Mackenzie Phillips ("One Day at a Time") guest star as relatives of other victims in the new episode "The Pact." Thomas Gibson, Shemar Moore and Jeanne Tripplehorn also star.

8 p.m. on 19
Supernatural

Kevin, Sam and Dean (Osric Chau, Jared Padalecki, Jensen Ackles) rescue Kevin's mother (Lauren Tom) after finding her surrounded by Crowley's (Mark Sheppard) demons. She joins them on their search for the tablet and quickly makes it clear she's not to be trifled with when she attempts to take on Crowley all by herself in the new episode "What's Up, Tiger Mommy?"

9 p.m. on 25
Nashville

Comparisons to "Country Strong" and "All About Eve" are inevitable in this enjoyable sudsier that's a little bit country and a little bit political/family potboiler. Connie Britton ("American Horror Story") stars as Rayna, a veteran songbird who suddenly finds her personal life and her career impinged upon by Juliette, a marginally talented sexpot (Hayden Panettiere) with secrets to spare. Powers Boothe and Eric Close also star.

9 p.m. on 14
Chicago Fire

The professional lives, personal demons and interpersonal conflicts of firefighters, paramedics and rescue personnel are at the heart of this new drama from Dick Wolf ("Law & Order"). Jesse Spencer ("House") and Terry Kinney ("Trauma") star as Lt. Matthew Casey of the fire department and Lt. Kelly Severide, his rescue squad counterpart.

9 p.m. on 44
CSI: Crime Scene Investigation

Talk about working through lunch! In this new episode, the investigators show up at their favorite diner only to encounter a grisly scene: eight dead bodies. Their meal plans are put on hold as they try to find out what happened in "Code Blue Plate Special." Ted Danson, Elisabeth Shue, George Eads and Jorja Fox star.

9 p.m. on 9 35
Nova scienceNOW

New York Times technology reporter David Pogue takes over as host of the series as it embarks on its new season with "What Makes Us Human?" It explores the evolutionary roots of language, tool making, laughter and other qualities that help separate humans from the other animals on this planet.

9 p.m. on A
Duck Dynasty

The colorful Robertsons return for Season 2 of the breakaway hit that shows how they run their sprawling duck-call empire in Louisiana while still maintaining their down-home ways. In the premiere, "Driving Miss Sadie," each family member takes a turn trying to impart wisdom to Willie's teenage kids.

9:45 p.m. on M
Movie: Hart's War

A tense trial unfolds within the walls of a POW camp in this 2002 World War II drama from TV-directing veteran Gregory Hoblit ("L.A. Law," "Hill Street Blues"). Although Bruce Willis gets top billing, Colin Farrell ("Phone Booth," "Daredevil") has the title role as an incarcerated lawyer who clashes with a high-ranking captive (Willis) while defending another prisoner (Terrence Howard) charged with murder.

Mariska Hargitay

10 p.m. on 44
Two and a Half Men

Three men — actually, make that two men and a boy — start learning to live together in this sitcom's pilot episode. Charlie Sheen plays a confirmed-bachelor jingle writer whose life is thrown into havoc by two visitors unlikely to leave soon: his conservative brother (Jon Cryer, "The Famous Teddy Z"), who has marital woes, and the sibling's young son (Angus T. Jones).
